Police capture bank robbery suspect

MIKE LAWRENCE / THE GLEANER

Henderson police survey the scene of a robbery at Green River Area Federal Credit Union on Second Street in Henderson Thursday. A suspect in the robbery was taken into custody on Gabe Street about an hour later.

■ Officials believe man responsible for other area heists

A suspected bank robber is in custody, clearing Thursday afternoon's holdup at the Green River Area Federal Credit Union. And authorities believe he is also responsible for seven other robberies dating back to 2006.

James Allen Morris, 53, 500 block of Gabe Street, has been charged with eight counts of first-degree robbery, according to Henderson Police Officer Jennifer Richmond, public information officer.

Morris was taken into custody soon after Thursday's robbery, which occurred around 2 p.m. at the credit union on Second Street.

Richmond said a man, later identified as Morris, walked into the bank and demanding money.

He told bank employees that he had a gun, Richmond said, but didn't show a weapon.

After leaving the bank with an unspecified amount of cash, Richmond said the man "ran down an alley west of the bank and got into a silver, four-door Pontiac G6."

Within minutes, law enforcement saturated the area, equipped with the description of the man and the silver vehicle, believed to be occupied by the alleged suspect.

While the search was under way for the robbery suspect, Henderson County High School went into "lockdown" for about 10 minutes on Thursday afternoon, according to a notification placed to parents through the One Call system.

Young artist gets musical boost

■ 'Starz' event helps finance scholarships

By Donna B. Stinnett

When Jesse Moore was 8 or 9 years old, he taught himself to play Beethoven's "Für Elise" using a keyboard program and memorized it to play for his family on the piano.

That's when Jesse's grandmother, Angela Wright, realized that her grandson had some musical talent and that formal lessons might help reveal how far he could go with it.

Unfortunately, not long after Jesse started taking piano lessons, his grandmother was diagnosed with a serious illness and was no longer able to work, which limited the amount of household funds available for piano lessons.

"We just didn't have the money anymore," Wright said, "but I wanted him to do it so bad. Here he is with this talent, and I hated for him to not continue with lessons. What a waste when you see somebody who's got that kind of talent."

That's where RiverBend Academy stepped in and provided scholarship money so that Jesse could keep pursuing his music studies.

It's students like Jesse Moore who will benefit from Saturday evening's "Starz Ballroom Blitz!," a fundraiser for RiverBend that will take place at Henderson Fine Arts Center.

Steve Casey, RiverBend dance instructor and dance coordinator for Saturday's event, said scholarships are a big part of the service that RiverBend provides to the community's arts education.

Jesse Moore, 13, right, listens to his teacher Julie Nantz as she instructs him during his lesson at RiverBend Academy Wednesday evening. Moore has been taking lessons for two years. He said his youth pastor at First Assembly of God wants him to play keyboards for their youth band.

"We tracked over $25,000 given for scholarships in 2012 and that was a direct result of this event," Casey said. "The lessons have been great for Jesse as far as confidence and just being able to talk to people and his own self-worth."

After a year of lessons,

Jesse is plugging away with instructor Julie Nantz and has participated in one recital. The 13-year-old is learning to read music, which he said will be helpful going forward, and has even composed a piece of music, his grandmother said.

"The lessons have impacted me because I like music and I wanted to learn how to play something," Jesse said. "I like doing things with my hands. Piano was the best option."

Wright agreed that it was a good fit for her

Poll: Most envision economic issues without debt rise

■ 21 percent oppose boost

By Alan Fram
and Jennifer Agiesta
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Most Americans think jarring economic problems will erupt if lawmakers fail to increase the government's borrowing limit. Yet they're torn over how or even whether to raise it, leaning toward Republican demands that any boost be accompanied by spending cuts.

According to an Associated Press-GfK poll, 53 percent say that if the debt limit is not extended and the U.S. defaults, the country will face a major economic crisis. An additional 27 percent say such a crisis would be somewhat likely, while just 17 percent largely dismiss the prospects of such damage.

Separately, Republican officials said Wednesday that GOP lawmakers may seek a short-term extension of the debt limit, thus avoiding a default as early as next month by the U.S. Treasury while they try to negotiate spending cuts with President Barack Obama over the next few months. "The worst thing for the economy is for this Congress and this administration to do nothing to get our debt and deficits under control," said Rep. Paul Ryan, the party's 2012 vice presidential candidate who is chairman of the House Budget Committee.

The poll's findings echo many economists' warnings that failure to raise the debt ceiling and the resulting, unprecedented

Three charged with killing man, dismembering body

By Brett Barrouquere
Associated Press

Three men are accused of killing a convicted drug dealer to "rid the world of evil" and cutting up his body so police couldn't easily identify him, authorities said Thursday.

The trio lured Daniel Delfin, 19, to the town of Walton, Ky., with the ruse of buying drugs from him, beat him on the way to one location before driving him to a field, where he was beaten again and strangled, Boone County Sheriff's Department spokesman Tom Scheben said. The men used a machete and possibly a saw to dismember Delfin, police said, and his torso and legs were found in the field. His other parts were likely thrown in a trash bin, authorities said.

Delfin had been arrested in May for trafficking heroin near Walton-Verona High School and was later convicted. He was on probation at the time of his death, Northern Kentucky Drug Strike Force official Bill Mark said.

'Dear Abby' advice columnist dies at age 94

By Steve Karnowski
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Pauline Friedman Phillips, who under the name of Abigail Van Buren, wrote the long-running "Dear Abby" advice column that was followed by millions of newspaper readers throughout the world, has died. She was 94.

Publicist Gene Willis of Universal Uclick said Phillips died Wednesday after a long battle with Alzheimer's disease.

Phillips' column competed for decades with the advice column of Ann Landers, written by her twin sister, Esther Friedman Lederer. Their relationship was stormy in their early adult years, but later they regained the close relationship they had growing up in Sioux City, Iowa.

The two columns differed in style. Ann Landers responded to questioners with homey, detailed advice. Abby's replies were often flippant one-liners.

Gray seal video streamed to public

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Maine – A camera that records seal-pupping activities on a remote Maine island began streaming live to the public Thursday in what’s believed to be the first live-streaming camera at an East Coast seal-pupping site.

Similar high-definition cameras have been set up around the world in recent years to capture the activities of eagles, polar bears, loons, black bears and other animals. The camera on Seal Island, about 20 miles off the midcoast of Maine, provides views of gray seals that migrate to the island each year to give birth.

It’s expensive and difficult for scientists to visit gray seal-pupping grounds because they are on islands, with the births taking place in the winter when ocean conditions can be inhospitable.

Seal Island’s tower-mounted camera gives scientists a firsthand look into the progression of seal-pupping season so they can gather information such as when peak pupping occurs and how long it takes seal pups to molt, said Stephanie Wood, a biologist with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The 65-acre island is owned by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and managed in cooperation with the National Audubon Society. Audubon, in conjunction with explore.org, set up two cameras on the island last spring to stream live video of clown-like Atlantic puffins that make the island their home each summer.

With the puffins gone for the season, Audubon offered to let NOAA keep one of the cameras on the island to record the gray seals that swim there each fall.

Officials seek whooping crane killer

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS – Indiana and federal wildlife officials are looking for someone who shot a federally endangered whooping crane in southern Indiana’s Jackson County.

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources is encouraging anyone with information about the 2011 shooting to call its Turn in a Poacher program. Whooping cranes are protected by the Endangered Species Act and other federal and state laws. Officials have offered rewards totaling $7,500.

A carcass of the rare bird was found Dec. 30, 2011 near the Muscatatuck River basin about 40 miles north of Louisville, Ky. Investigators say X-rays show the bird suffered a fatal shotgun wound. The bird was part of an effort to establish a flock on a migratory path between Wisconsin and Florida.

HENDERSON COUNTY SHERIFF’S OFFICE

■ Karla R. Jones, 31, 1200 block of O’Byrne Street, was arrested Tuesday on a federal warrant for being a fugitive from justice. Jones is wanted in Illinois on charges of two counts of possession of chemicals knowing it would be used to manufacture a controlled substance.

The Henderson County Sheriff’s Office assisted

U.S. marshals in apprehending Jones.

■ Bobby J. Riley, 31, 100 block of North Julia Street, was arrested Tuesday on warrants charging him with first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Charges stem from an ongoing investigation into suspected drug trafficking and methamphetamine manufacturing.

Riley was lodged at the Henderson County Detention Center under a $5,000 full-cash bond.

Indiana county schools considering arming teachers

■ Sheriff's proposal subject to officials' acceptance

The Associated Press

ALBION, Ind. — Teachers in a northeastern Indiana county may soon be carrying guns in school if officials accept a proposal from the county sheriff.

Under Noble County Sheriff Doug Harp's plan, officials would choose up to four teachers in each school to undergo firearms training and be appointed as special deputies. The teachers' authority would be limited to school buildings.

The Central Noble (County) School Board voted Tuesday night to consider the idea.

Harp has delivered the same proposal to the East and West Noble School districts northwest of Fort Wayne.

Harp said that arming teachers would be more economical than paying school security officers. A private donor has offered to provide the guns if the plan is accepted.

"This was the only option we really felt where we could slow down an active shooter, or stop an active shooter because our response time typically is after the fact," Harp told WPTA-TV in Fort Wayne.

Harp said he would not charge the school to train staff members.

"A lot of the training we're talking about would mirror exactly what a normal police officer would go through, you know yearly qualifications, weapons safety and on-going training," he said.

Central Noble Community Schools already has security measures like locked doors and safety drills, but Superintendent Chris Daughtry said an armed staff member could make the difference between life and death.

"Most of these killings take place in a very short time window and by time the police actually get on the scene, the damage is done," said Daughtry.

Other school districts across the country have reviewed similar proposals prompted by last month's mass shooting at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn.

The Central Noble board meets next on Feb. 19. No timeline for a decision was discussed.

Costly ticket

Deborah Potter, a citation officer with the Owensboro Police Department, slips a parking ticket into a plastic sleeve before placing it on a pickup along St. Ann Street near Third Street Wednesday in Owensboro. A proposed plan to substantially raise a variety of parking fines has drawn criticism from the public and from some members of the Owensboro City Commission.

Two plants will share in Corvette production

The Associated Press

NASHVILLE — Two General Motors plants 90 miles apart will be utilized to build the newest incarnation of the Chevrolet Corvette sports car.

The vehicle is assembled at the GM plant in Bowling Green, Ky.

The Tennessean (<http://ttnn.ws/U3xHIH>) reported that, for the first time, some body components will be manufactured at the carmaker's plant in Spring Hill, Tenn.

"We will be making the front and rear fascias and sending them up to Bowling Green," said Spring Hill plant spokeswoman Lee Ann Williams-Maley.

The fascias are essentially the front and rear bumper assemblies, which will be manufactured of a plastic composite material in special injection molds.

More workers will be needed in Spring Hill to make the components, but Michael Herron, chairman of United Auto Workers Local 1853 said it isn't yet clear how many more.

"Our team members are very excited about being a part of this exciting new vehicle for Chevrolet," Herron said. "To me, getting this work for Spring Hill speaks volumes about the quality we've achieved in our injection-molding operation here."

The plant currently makes similar parts of the Chevrolet Traverse crossover vehicle.

The Spring Hill plant was built to make the Saturn auto brand, which has been discontinued.

In Bowling Green, GM is spending $131 million to retool the assembly plant where Corvettes have been produced since mid-1991.

The company intends to begin selling the redesigned Corvette in the third quarter of 2013.

Briefs

Kentucky jobless rate declines

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky Education and Workforce Development Cabinet says the state's jobless rate has dropped to 8.1 percent.

A statement from the agency on Thursday said the rate for December 2012 was down from 8.2 percent in November and well below the 9 percent recorded in December 2011.

According to data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, jobs in the leisure and hospitality field grew by 1,100, jobs in the educational and health services rose by 500 and jobs in the informational and financial sectors grew by a total of 600.

Employment fields that posted job losses included mining and logging, manufacturing and government.

State school official realizes goal

FRANKFORT — Kentucky Education Commissioner Terry Holliday has accomplished his goal of visiting schools in all 174 public school systems in the state.

The Kentucky Department of Education reports that visiting every district was a goal Holliday set when he was named commissioner in 2009. The final visits were to schools in Green and Hart counties Tuesday.

KDE says Holliday visited more than 400 schools. He met with teachers and administrators, served a few lunches, helped teach classes and occasionally returned to his roots as a music teacher and helped lead the school band.

Labor department revises safety rules

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — The U.S. Department of Labor has approved new rules it says will improve safety at the nation's most dangerous mines by revising the way operators are designated pattern violators.

Labor Secretary Hilda Solis said Thursday they improve the Mine Safety and Health Administration's ability to hold mine operators accountable for disregarding life-saving safety measures.

MSHA chief Joe Main says they're long overdue and could prevent 1,800 injuries over 10 years.

The changes were proposed after the Upper Big Branch mine exploded in April 2010, killing 29 men.

Among other things, they let MSHA designate a company a pattern violator without a prior warning.

They also eliminate the requirement that MSHA can consider only final orders, meaning its hands are no longer tied when operators appeal violations.

Police: Teen plots to kill parents

SOMERSET — Police say a Kentucky teen and his friend are facing charges after plotting to kill his parents.

According to media reports, deputies responded to a stabbing early Wednesday at a home near Somerset. Lt. Det. Brett Whitaker said that despite having stab wounds, the homeowner was able to overpower the man who attacked him and hold him until police arrived.

Whitaker said detectives determined the homeowner's 17-year-old son had asked his friend, 18-year-old Paul Scott Young, to kill his parents. Whitaker said police are still searching for a motive.

Police did not name the juvenile, but said he is charged with criminal solicitation to murder, and Young is charged with attempted murder. Jail records don't indicate whether Young has an attorney.

Radcliff man charged in infant son's death

RADCLIFF — Radcliff police have charged a man in the death of his infant son.

The News-Enterprise (<http://bit.ly/Ybbq5I>) in Elizabethtown reported 23-year-old Jarrod D. Davis was arrested Wednesday afternoon on a charge of second-degree manslaughter.

Police spokesman Bryce Shumate said the baby boy was found dead in his crib when police responded to a call from a Radcliff apartment Tuesday. Shumate said Davis initially told police he had found the boy — identified as J.D. — dead in the crib.

After the medical examiner found blunt force trauma to the baby's head, Davis told police he had dropped the boy while caring for him and the baby's head struck the side of the crib.

Bond had not been set for Davis Wednesday night and arraignment was scheduled for Thursday in Hardin District Court.

Officials: State's toxic releases decreasing

FRANKFORT — Kentucky officials say an inventory that records toxic releases by industries in the state showed a reduction in releases in 2011.

The Department for Environmental Protection says in a statement that total onsite and offsite toxic releases were 83.6 million pounds in 2011, which is a nearly 14 percent decrease from 2010, when it was 97 million pounds.

The department says more than 90 percent of the 2011 total was attributed to recycling, treatment and energy recovery, instead of releases that go into air, water or land.

The figures include data from 423 facilities and 154 chemicals, including lead and arsenic-based compounds.

The department says the toxic release data shows a downward trend since 1988 that "reflects the success of the Clean Air Act and air quality standards."

Without unity, economic deal dead on arrival

The commentators waiting for President Barack Obama to take the White House podium Monday made much of this being the last news conference of his first term, implying that it could be almost a valedictory look back over the past four years.

Fortunately, Obama was anything but reflective. He moved quickly and almost combatively to seize the high ground in the coming debate over raising the debt limit, currently $16.4 billion, on how much Uncle Sam can borrow.

The debt ceiling, which the country is expected to reach by early March, is the first of three economic hurdles Obama faces this spring. It is also the most important.

If the ceiling is not raised, the U.S. government goes into technical default, meaning government employees from the Marines to meat inspectors do not get paid and foreign governments forgo the interest on U.S. debt they purchased in good faith.

GOP Tea Party-movement followers in the House broke with the leadership last year to force a near-default. Although no bills went unpaid, this resulted in an international downgrade in America's credit rating.

Not this time, said Obama: “The full faith and credit of the United States of America is not a bargaining chip. And they” — the House Republican hard-liners — “better decide quickly, because time is running short.”

In short order after that, Obama and Congress must deal with an automatic, across-the-board slash of more than $1 billion in government spending. The dramatic meat-ax approach was an unsuccessful attempt to galvanize lawmakers into attacking the deficit problem. The deficit is still there, and we're still stuck with the automatic cuts.

Congress then must pass a spending bill to keep the government running after the temporary spending measure enacted last fall expires, again risking a government shutdown and economic setback.

The debt ceiling is the most immediate and pressing issue and the one on which the president was most forceful.

Tea Partiers demand federal spending cuts that match the debt-ceiling increase dollar for dollar. But Obama countered that there would be “no ransom for trashing the American economy.”

There is pressure on Obama to bypass Congress and unilaterally raise the debt ceiling, under the constitutional provision that says the validity of the public debt for paying our bills “shall not be questioned.”

The president has said that he won't do this, but he seemed to open the door at his news conference if Congress balks.

It could be a good year, Obama said, “if only politics don't get in the way.” It's a variation of an old Washington expression about unrealistic hopes: If we had some ham, we could have ham, and eggs if we had some eggs.

ing under that same grand old flag. The president, if a reminder is needed, is their commander in chief. Count me out. The idea is totally repugnant. Tyranny, you say? People who raise the threat of government tyranny should be congratulated — but only for having lived a sheltered life. North Korea is a tyranny, the old Soviet Union was a tyranny, the United States is not a tyranny, not even close, not under Barack Obama, not previously under George W. Bush.

Like everything in modern life, the word “tyrant” has been devalued and dumbed down to the point of meaninglessness. What we have is a government that some people don't like — and fair enough, they may have good reason. It was ever thus: Abraham Lincoln was considered a tyrant, but he left words to describe what we really do have, however imperfectly,

“a government of the people, by the people and for the people.”

Any American who needs an assault weapon for possibly making war on his supposedly dictatorial government is really contemplating another Civil War. Has the nation become so brain-dead that it has forgotten the horrors of brother fighting brother?

If the Second Amendment was really about empowering the people to resist despotism, why doesn't it allow everybody to have machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades, the better to succeed in their resistance?

Besides, the idea that the Founding Fathers were almost inviting armed insurrection with the Second Amendment does not square with the historical record. Not long after the Revolution, farmers in Western Pennsylvania rose up violently to oppose a tax on the whiskey they distilled from their grain (they wanted to become excited about something but the Steelers had yet to be invented).

The Whiskey Rebellion was put down in 1794 by an army sent by President George Washington, who rode at the head of it. From the earliest, the federal government made it clear that it wasn't going to tolerate any nonsense from armed blowhards who thought freedom meant anarchy.

We should take the point. Gun extremists shouldn't be allowed to justify possession of hugely powerful guns that can massacre a crowd of kids quickly and efficiently because those guns one day might need to be turned on the government to preserve freedom.

At this point of our bloody history, this should not be a respectable idea. There is an old word that we should resurrect for this poisonous argument: treasonous.

Guns don't kill people? What are certain guns but killing machines? Killing machines made by people to kill other people.

The real prize goes to those who can think their way to reducing the carnage.

it suggests that harsh interrogations produced intelligence that led to the discovery of bin Laden's whereabouts. The senators are now investigating the CIA's communications with the filmmakers to determine whether “inappropriate” access was provided. Your tax dollars at work.

Acting CIA Director Michael Morell was among those who provided access — appropriate or not — to “Zero” director Kathryn Bigelow and screenwriter Mark Boal. Morell released a statement saying that harsh interrogations were not “the key to finding bin Laden.”

He acknowledged, however, that some intel did come “from detainees subjected to enhanced techniques.” Former CIA Director Michael Hayden and former Attorney General Michael Mukasey have both said the same. Actually, Mukasey has gone further, saying that 9/11 mastermind Khalid Sheik Mohammed “broke like a dam,” thanks to waterboarding, and provided a “torrent of information.”

In addition to airing, “Homeland,” Showtime has been broadcasting Oliver Stone's “Untold History of the United States,” a series that re-litigates the Cold War, finding Truman more to blame than Stalin, and tells audiences that Americans not only aren't “the good guys,” but that we are “the wrong side.”

This debate is of far more than academic interest. It is hugely consequential at a time when Americans are trying to decide whether we should be robustly defending America and other free nations from those who proclaim themselves our enemies, or whether we should be attempting to address the “legitimate grievances” of those we have supposedly wronged.

The elite broadcast media has been unwilling to give Stone's critics — most notably historian Ron Radosh — an opportunity to challenge Stone's “facts” and his broader conceit that the truth about the Cold War has for years been hidden from Americans. Nor have members of the U.S. Senate taken exception to Stone's attempt to breathe new life into old Soviet propaganda. Nor, for that matter, has serious concern been expressed on Capitol Hill over Al Jazeera's imminent entry into 40 million American homes with former Vice President Al Gore opening the doors.

As for “Homeland,” I found the series generally nuanced despite that the most articulate character was Abu Nazir who, at a climactic moment in the story, explains to CIA agent Carrie — the series' heroine whom he's taken prisoner and handcuffed to a pipe — why drone attacks and other forms of American aggression justify the mass murder of civilians.

I doubt Mullah Nazir could have done as well, though I suppose we'll never know. That fact, I should acknowledge, causes me minimal distress.

Mumbai plot gets man 14 years

By Tammy Webber
and Jason Keyser
Associated Press

CHICAGO—A Chicago businessman was sentenced to 14 years in prison Thursday for providing material support to overseas terrorism, including a Pakistani group whose 2008 attacks in Mumbai, India, left more than 160 people dead. Tahawwur Rana did not address the court before U.S. District Judge Harry Leinenweber imposed the sentence and did not react afterward. But his defense attorneys said the judge was right to reject prosecutors' arguments that Rana deserved a stiffer sentence because the charges were related to terrorism.

Jurors in 2011 convicted Rana of providing support for the Pakistani group, Lashkar-e-Taiba, and for supporting a never-carried-out plot to attack a Danish newspaper that printed cartoons of the Prophet Muhammad in 2005.

The cartoons angered many Muslims because pictures of the prophet are prohibited in Islam.

But jurors cleared Rana of the third and most serious charge of involvement in the three-day rampage in Mumbai, which has often been called India's 9/11.

"We think the judge made the right ruling," defense attorney Patrick Blegen said, adding that he intends to appeal Rana's conviction because the judge refused to separate the Denmark and Mumbai charges.

Prosecutors, who had sought a sentence of up to 30 years, issued a statement in which acting-U.S. Attorney Gary S. Shapiro called the 14-year term a "serious" sentence "that should go a long way towards convincing would-be terrorists that they can't hide behind the scenes, lend support to the violent aims of terrorist organizations and escape detection and punishment."

U.S. to lend training aid for Mexico's drug fight

By Kimberly Dozier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—The Pentagon is stepping up aid for Mexico's bloody drug war with a new U.S.-based special operations headquarters to teach Mexican security forces how to hunt drug cartels the same way special operations teams hunt al-Qaida, according to documents and interviews with multiple U.S. officials.

Such assistance could help newly elected Mexican President Enrique Peña Nieto establish a military force to focus on drug criminal networks that have terrorized Mexico's northern states and threatened the Southwest border. Mexican officials say warring drug gangs have killed at least 70,000 people between 2006 and 2012.

Based at the U.S. Northern Command in Colorado, Special Operations Command-North will build on a commando program that has brought Mexican military, intelligence and law enforcement officials to study U.S. counterterrorist operations from the U.S. to the war zones, to show them how special operations troops built an interagency network to target al-Qaida mastermind Osama bin Laden and his followers.

The special operations team within Northcom will be turned into a new headquarters, led by a general instead of a colonel, which was established in a Dec. 31 memo signed by Defense Secretary Leon Panetta.

That move gives the group more autonomy and the number of people could eventually triple from 30 to 150, meaning the headquarters could expand its training missions with the Mexicans, even though no new money is being assigned to the mission.

The special operations program already has helped Mexican officials set up their own intelligence center in Mexico City to target criminal networks, patterned after similar centers in war zones built to target al-Qaida in Afghanistan and Iraq, two U.S. officials said.

Mexican and U.S. military officials played down the change, and it's unclear whether the Mexican government will agree to boost its training.

"We are merely placing a component commander in charge of things we are already doing," said Northcom spokesman Navy Capt. Jeff Davis in a written statement.

Judge orders sanity review for soldier

SEATTLE—An Army staff sergeant accused of massacring Afghan civilians must undergo an official sanity review before a mental health defense can be presented, the military judge overseeing the case said Thursday.

Staff Sgt. Robert Bales deferred entering a plea Thursday at Joint Base Lewis-McChord to 16 counts of premeditated murder and other charges related to a nighttime attack on two villages last March. The Army is seeking the death penalty.

But the judge, Col. Jeffery Nance, took up arguments over whether Bales can present a mental health defense or testimony from mental health experts, given that he has not yet participated in a "sanity board" review.

The judge ordered that to take place, but made no decisions about the conditions for the review or what information from it would be turned over to prosecutors.

Such reviews are conducted by neutral doctors tasked with discerning a defendant's mental state at the time of the crime and whether he's competent to stand trial.

Bales was serving his fourth deployment, and his lawyers said he may have suffered from a traumatic brain injury.

Obesity rates drop in NYC, rise in L.A.

NEW YORK—In the battle against childhood obesity, New York City appears to be doing better than Los Angeles, at least for low-income preschoolers.

A study released Thursday compared obesity rates for young poor children in the nation's two largest cities over nine years. Rates dipped in New York from about 19 percent to 16 percent. But in Los Angeles they rose from 17 percent to more than 21 percent before dropping to about 20 percent.

One reason for the difference: Los Angeles kids included many more Mexican-Americans, and obesity is more common in Mexican-American boys than in white or black kids.

The study joins other recent reports of declines in childhood obesity rates in places like Philadelphia, Anchorage and Kearney, Neb.

Maine senator has open mind on Hagel

BOSTON—Maine Sen. Angus King said Thursday that he sees no strong reason to oppose President Barack Obama's pick for secretary of defense.

The newly elected senator, an independent, said he won't make a final decision on former Sen. Chuck Hagel's nomination until confirmation hearings are finished. King serves as a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, which is scheduled to hold a confirmation hearing Jan. 31.

"I start with a presumption that the president should be able to appoint his own people to his Cabinet. So unless there's some strong disqualifying element or quality to the nominee, I start with that positive presumption," King said.

Asked whether he saw a strong disqualifying element or quality with Hagel, King said, "No."

Static keeps halting Taliban peace talks

KABUL—The United States wants serious peace negotiations with the Taliban to begin, but it has not been possible to get the process under way, the American ambassador to Afghanistan said Thursday.

James Cunningham said it was important for the Afghan government to get the talks started and to get the best results possible, yet he acknowledged that the peace process has not "even really begun."

The Afghan peace process, which has made little headway since it began several years ago, is hobbled by distrust among the major players, including the United States.

While talks with the Taliban remained stalled, there are signs of increasing efforts to get them back on track.

U.S.-backed talks broke down last March in a dispute over the release of five Taliban detainees held in U.S. custody at a military prison in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Algerian crisis halts Cameron's speech

LONDON—Prime Minister David Cameron is postponing a key speech about Britain and the EU because of the hostage crisis in Algeria, officials said Thursday.

The long-awaited address, scheduled for today in the Netherlands, was expected to outline how Cameron thinks Britain's relationship with the EU should change—a move that many fear could backfire and leave Britain increasingly isolated in Europe.

Cameron was expected to offer insights into how he proposes to renegotiate Britain's relationship with the EU, and whether that bartering will result in the country's ultimate exit from the bloc.

But the leader was sidetracked by a bloody hostage situation at a natural gas plant in the Sahara Desert.

Regardless of when an address will materialize, the prospect that it will signal Cameron's stance on Brussels has stirred vigorous political debate about Britain's future membership in the EU. The country's relationship with the European Union has been fraught since the creation of the bloc.

Suit claims surgeons left objects in body

BERLIN—A lawyer in Germany claims surgeons left objects in her client's body after an operation for prostate cancer.

Annette Corinth says doctors removed a needle, compresses and surgical strips from banker Helmut Brecht after his wounds failed to heal properly following surgery in 2009.

The 77-year-old ex-banker died last year and his family is seeking $106,216 damages for his suffering, plus costs, from the Henriettenstift hospital in Hannover. A spokesman for the Protestant Church-linked organization that runs the hospital rejected the claims.

Achim Balkhoff told The Associated Press Thursday the objects couldn't have been left in the patient's body during the operation because the equipment wasn't in use at the hospital. He added that the compensation demands were "unusually high."

Cleric calls off protests after making deal with government

By Zazar Khan
and Munir Ahmed

ISLAMABAD—Pakistani officials struck a deal late Thursday with a fiery Muslim cleric to end four days of anti-government protests that largely paralyzed the capital and put intense pressure on the government.

The demonstration came at a time when the government is facing challenges on several fronts, including from the country's top court. The Supreme Court ordered the arrest of the prime minister earlier in the week in connection with a corruption case, but the government's anti-corruption chief refused to act on Thursday, citing a lack of evidence.

Tahir-ul-Qadri, the 61-year-old cleric who led the protests in Islamabad, galvanized many Pakistanis with his message alleging that the nation's politicians are corrupt thieves who care more about lining their pockets than dealing with the country's pressing problems, such as electricity shortages, high unemployment and deadly attacks by Islamic militants. He demanded electoral reform to prevent corrupt politicians from standing for elections.

But his demand that the government be dissolved and replaced by a military-backed caretaker administration raised concerns that he was being used by the nation's powerful army to try to delay parliamentary elections expected this spring. Qadri has denied any connection to the army, which has a history of toppling civilian governments in military coups and has done little to hide its disdain for the country's politicians.

Tens of thousands of people responded to Qadri's call to hold a protest in Islamabad and camped out in the main avenue running through the city, huddling beneath blankets at night to ward off the cold.

But Qadri was left politically isolated Wednesday when a large group of opposition parties collectively announced they would not support the protest and opposed any movement that threatened democracy. Their response and suggestions by the country's interior minister that the government would use force to disperse the protesters might have factored into the cleric's decision to strike a deal, which fell short of his demands.

More than 100 Sunnis slain by gunmen

By Bassem Mroue
and Zeina Karam
Associated Press

BEIRUT—Gunmen loyal to President Bashar Assad swept through a mainly Sunni farming village in central Syria this week, torching houses and killing more than 100 people, including women and children, opposition activists said Thursday.

The reported slayings fueled accusations that pro-government militia-men are trying to drive majority Sunnis out of areas near main routes to the coast to ensure control of an Alawite enclave as the country's civil war increasingly takes on sectarian overtones.

Activists said the attackers were from nearby areas dominated by Shiite Muslims and allied Alawites. Assad and most of the top officials in his regime belong to the minority Alawite sect, a Shiite offshoot.

The events in Hasbiyeh, an impoverished farming area on the edge of Homs, unfolded Tuesday and Wednesday but only came to light Thursday as the reported scale of the killings became apparent.

An official in Damascus denied the reports, saying no such killings took place in the area and accusing rebels of using civilians as "human shields."

However, the pro-government daily newspaper Al-Watan reported Thursday that Syrian troops advanced in the countryside of Homs "cleansing the villages of Hasbiyeh and Dweir as well as their fields" from gunmen. It did not elaborate.

Farming

Weed control remains serious subject for grain growers

Weed control is and always has been on the minds of grain producers. We have in the last decade been somewhat spoiled. Some can remember when Johnson grass was public enemy number one and it took all we had to control it. Not so long ago, glyphosate resistant marestail gave some farmers fits. In most instances farmers have developed rotations and the use of herbicides with different modes of action to stay ahead of the game. However, as far as weed resistance, we haven't seen anything yet! One of those weeds that has taken up residence along the river and we will have to deal with is Palmer Amaranth. Samples taken from Posey and Vanderburgh Counties during 2011 survived 20 pounds active ingredient/acre glyphosate. That is equivalent to 7 gallons/acre of generic glyphosate in greenhouse screenings conducted at Purdue University. The most recent survey found 51 fields in five counties in Indiana that were not controlled by management tactics used during the 2012 growing season. Five fields were found in

Henderson County last year as well. Palmer Amaranth originally moved into Kentucky and Indiana through animal feeds (cotton seed). Now it is spreading up and down the river by water, birds, etc. It is a dioecious plant (a plant that produces a male plant and a female plant and not usually a single plant with both male and female parts) which forces outcrossing and genetic diversity. This gives Palmer Amaranth the ability to adapt and quickly spread herbicide resistant genes when selection pressure is applied such as a glyphosate only control program. It is a prolific seed producer; 100,000 plus seeds per plant even when in competition with other plants. Palmer Amaranth is suited to no-till or vertical tillage and can grow 2 to 3 inches a day. It can cause yield losses of 80 to 90 percent. It can have resistance to multiple herbicide modes. When we think of resistant weeds, Palmer Amaranth is the weed to watch as it could take top prize. Producers need to learn all they can and not take this weed for granted. In Henderson County alone we could see millions taken by this one weed or one like it. Think Palmer Amaranth when you start looking at weed control this year. There are other weeds, but this one deserves watching closely! USDA creates new loan program

■ ‘Microloans’ to benefit family-run farms, minority growers and military veterans

By Adrian Sainz
Associated Press

MEMPHIS – The U.S. Department of Agriculture has created a new loan program to help small farmers, including growers who want to take advantage of the soaring interest in locally produced food. Agriculture Department Secretary Tom Vilsack told The Associated Press on Monday that new “microloans” of up to $35,000 are designed to help bolster family-run farms as well as minority growers and military veterans seeking to start a farm who might otherwise have trouble qualifying for small loans from banks or other USDA loan programs. The loans can help farmers grow niche or organic crops to sell directly to ethnic and farmers markets, or contribute to community-supported agriculture programs. Vilsack noted direct-to-consumer sales was a fast-growing sector, with a 60 percent increase in farmers markets in the past three years. The loan also can cover the costs of renting land, seed, equipment and other expenses. The goal is to create more opportunities for entrepreneurship and employment in the farming industry, Vilsack said. “This smaller microloan program really is designed to help a producer that wants to get into the direct-to-consumer sales business or wants to help provide produce to, for example, a farmers market,” Vilsack said. “It will help bolster the local and regional food system movement that is taking place.” Vilsack said the new loan program also helps organic producers and small farmers who had been benefiting from grants and programs under the 2008 farm bill, which has not been extended by Congress. The microloan program also provides a more simplified application process in comparison with traditional farm loans. Kay Jensen, an organic farmer who raises broccoli, strawberries and tomatoes in Sun Prairie, Wis., saw two immediate benefits to the microloan program — paperwork would go down from about 30 pages to seven, and it would be easier to borrow a manageable sum. She said some lending programs try to cut costs by only giving out sums of $100,000 or more, and she might consider a microloan for $3,000 to $10,000 to expand her irrigation systems. “A lot of times what we need is just small amounts of money, but a lot of times the only funding available is large amounts of money,” she said. “This whole concept of a microloan, where you’re looking at smaller, reasonable amounts of money, this really fits an incredible niche.” Vilsack spoke to The Associated Press ahead of an official announcement of the program Tuesday. He was in Tennessee to speak to the American Farm Bureau Federation’s annual meeting in Nashville. Vilsack said the loans represent an effort to expand credit to minority, socially disadvantaged and young and beginning farmers and ranchers. The interest rate will be around 4.9 percent, and the loan does not have to be repaid for seven years, he said. “It’s about making sure that we have diversity within agriculture, that we have a good blend of large production facilities, medium-sized operations and smaller operations,” Vilsack said. Since 2009, the federal government has issued more than 128,000 loans totaling nearly $18 billion through the Farm Service Agency Operating Loan Program. It has increased the number of loans to beginning farmers and ranchers from 11,000 loans in 2008 to 15,000 loans in 2011. Those interested in applying for a microloan may contact their local Farm Service Agency office. Associated Press writer Dinesh Ramde in Milwaukee contributed to this report.

Kentucky USDA Farm Service Agency State Executive Director John W. McCauley reminds landowners that the Land Contract Guarantee Program is available to landowners who wish to transfer farm real estate to the next generation of farmers and ranchers. The Land Contract Guarantee Program provides a new approach for landowners willing to sell their land to beginning or socially disadvantaged farmers or ranchers because it reduces the seller's financial risk if the buyer defaults on the contract payments. The buyer must provide a minimum down payment of five percent of the purchase price, plan to operate the farm, and demonstrate the ability to make the land contract payments. The national program offers two options, one that guarantees up to three annual installment payments on the contract and one that guarantees 90% of the unpaid principal of the contract. Guarantees can be used for financing the purchase of a farm with a purchase price up to $500,000 on a new land contract. “Landowners can use any escrow agent that meets the program qualifications to service the land contract,” said McCauley. “Landowners interested in the Land Contract Guarantee Program can contact their local farm loan office to obtain a list of available nationwide escrow agents that can be used with this program,” he said. FSA credit programs are designed to provide credit to eligible producers when conventional or commercial credit is not available or does not meet their credit needs. “FSA programs create opportunities for farmers and ranchers – the backbone of our rural economy,” said McCauley.

grandson. “He enjoys it and it’s such an opportunity for him. It builds on his natural talent,” Wright said, noting that because he has a natural ear for music, the discipline of lessons and learning to read music has been good and challenging. “Sometimes he wants to do things his own way.” Wright said she thinks the music discipline has been good in other ways that she can see after he switched from a home-school environment to public school this year. “He has just blown my socks off,” she said, noting that he has fit in well in his classrooms and looks forward to going school and his music lessons. He may soon start playing with his church youth group band.

That’s just another step, thanks to RiverBend, toward the future that she hopes continued to include an outlet for music. “I can’t sing their praises high enough,” Wright said. “I’m excited to see what he’s going to end up doing some day.”

POLL from 1A

federal default would risk wounding the world economy because many interest rates are pegged to the trustworthiness of the U.S. to pay its debts. Obama and many Republicans agree with that, though some GOP lawmakers eager to force Obama to accept spending cuts have downplayed a default’s impact. When asked which political path to follow, 39 percent of poll respondents support the insistence by House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, and Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., that deep spending cuts be attached to any measure increasing the debt ceiling. That’s more than the 30 percent who back Obama’s demand that borrowing authority be raised quickly and not entwined with a bitter fight over trimming the budget. An additional 21 percent oppose boosting the debt ceiling at all. The survey was conducted as the two parties gird for a debt-limit battle that is likely to dominate the next two months in the capital. The fight is sure to underscore partisan differences over how to curb federal deficits that have surpassed $1 trillion for four straight years. Obama insists that besides spending cuts there should be more tax increases on the wealthy, which the GOP opposes. While saying he will refuse to negotiate on the debt ceiling, Obama has said he will bargain separately on finding ways to reduce the annual federal deficit. Despite the majority in the survey who fear severe economic problems if the debt limit is not raised, in a separate question only about 3 in 10 supported the general idea of increasing the ceiling. Four in 10 opposed it, with the rest expressing neutral feelings. Democrats were about twice as likely as Republicans to support boosting the borrowing limit, while Republicans were likelier than Democrats by a similar margin to oppose an increase. The government reached its $16.4 trillion borrowing limit Dec. 31 but has avoided default by using cash from pension and other funds it administers, money that will eventually be replaced. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner has said his ability to use such bookkeeping measures will be exhausted by early March or sooner. Wayne Wiedrich, 46, an engineering inspector in Williston, N.D., said in a poll follow-up interview that he agrees that failure to boost the debt ceiling would risk severe problems. “But on the other hand, it’s not doing the economy any good to raise the debt limit, print money and spend money we don’t have. One of these days China will come knocking on our door and say, ‘We own you,’” he said, referring to the country that holds more U.S. debt than any other nation. Homemaker Sherry

This Nov. 16, 2012, file photo shows President Barack Obama, accompanied by House Speaker John Boehner of Ohio, speaking to reporters in the Roosevelt Room of the White House in Washington, as he hosted a meeting of the bipartisan, bicameral leadership of Congress to discuss the deficit and economy. Most Americans think jarring economic problems would erupt if lawmakers fail to increase the government’s borrowing limit. Yet they’re torn over how and even whether to raise it, leaning slightly toward Republican demands that any boost be accompanied by spending cuts, according to an Associated Press-GfK poll.

Giordano, 59, of Feasterville, Pa., disagreed. “It has to be done,” she said of raising the borrowing limit. “We shouldn’t risk our reputation or spend money and time arguing about it. We have to pay our debts.” The survey showed slight shifts in concerns about the economy and federal budget deficits. Eighty-six percent consider the economy a top issue, down 5 percentage points from last summer, while 76 percent have the same view on federal deficits, up 7 points since then. Around one-third expect the economy to worsen over the next year, the highest figure in AP-GfK polling in nearly two years. Less than 1 in 4 think the economy is in good shape, a fairly stable number since last summer. Despite the slight edge people give the GOP’s debt limit path, the survey showed Obama with some advantages as he begins his second term. Fifty-four percent approve of how he is handling his job, a figure that has changed little over the past year. That is more than triple Congress’ 17 percent approval rating, which edged down 6 percentage points since early December, before the two sides’ “fiscal cliff” fight ended with Republicans largely accepting Obama’s demands to raise taxes on the country’s highest earners. Democrats also have a slight 41 percent to 36 percent advantage over Republicans as the party more trusted to handle the economy. Both Obama and Congress have fallen in the public’s esteem after their last battle over the debt ceiling. In AP-GfK polling in June 2011, the president held a 52 percent approval rating. By August, it had declined to 46 percent after down-to-the-wire negotiations with Congress. Congressional approval ratings fell even further, from an already weak 21 percent in June to just 12 percent after the year’s debt limit standoff finally ended. When it comes to finding savings to balance the budget, nearly half prefer cutting government services as the GOP wants, 3 in 10 would rather increase taxes and about 1 in 10 would do both.

ROBBERY from 1A

“During that time, students were extremely cooperative while the building was swept for intruders,” according to information from the message. Morris was located around 3:30 p.m. on Gabe Street and taken into custody. Further investigation revealed that Morris is allegedly responsible for bank robberies as far back as 2006, Richmond said. In addition to Thursday’s robbery at the credit union, Richmond said authorities have charged Morris with the July robbery at the same credit union, the August robberies at Independence Bank and the Bank of Henderson, a 2011 holdup at the U.S. Bank, a 2007 robbery and a 2006 robbery at the U.S. Bank and a 2006 heist at Old National Bank. Richmond said city police were able to recover some of the money stolen from the credit union on Thursday. Morris is being lodged at the Henderson County Detention Center.

Drug Strike Force official Bill Mark said. Scheduled to appear in court Thursday for a preliminary hearing were Jeffrey W. Allen of Verona, 21; Anthony D. Baumgartner of Florence, 23; and Stephen E. Harkness, 22, of Verona. The three are charged with murder, kidnapping, abuse of a corpse and tampering with evidence. A call to the public defender’s office in Boone County wasn’t immediately returned. Scheben said the men told authorities they killed Delfin because “they wanted to rid the world of evil.” He wasn’t sure exactly what they meant. Delfin was reported missing Sunday by his sister, but police think he was killed several days earlier on Jan. 9. His torso and legs were discovered Monday in the field near where Allen lived with his mother, just across the river from Cincinnati. During the search for Delfin, detectives received a tip that the three men were involved in his death. After the arrests, one of the three was “a little more” talkative, Scheben said. “But then they started adding to it,” Scheben said. After being told that some of the parts had been taken to a trash bin, deputies searched the Rumpke Landfill in Pendleton County hoping to find more remains. Nothing was found, however, and detectives do not plan to return to the landfill because they have already made positive identification, Scheben said. Delfin’s family could not be reached for comment. Police believe the three men removed the head, hands and feet to delay or prevent identification of the remains. Along with the heroin trafficking conviction, Delfin had five other convictions for marijuana possession on his record. In January 2012, he was also convicted of theft from an auto and receiving stolen property. He was sentenced to 10 days in jail. Baumgartner was charged in March 2007 with first-degree possession of cocaine, possession of another drug which was not specified and possession of drug paraphernalia, The Kentucky Enquirer reported. One of the drug possession charges and the paraphernalia charge were dismissed. In March 2009, Baumgartner pleaded guilty to theft by unlawful taking in Kenton County and was sentenced to 60 days in jail and two years of probation. Also in 2009, he was charged with carrying a concealed weapon in Campbell County; that charge was later dismissed. The paper reported that neither Allen nor Harkness had criminal records. pie.). Their father was a well-off owner of a movie theater chain. Their mother took care of the home. Both were immigrants from Russia who had fled their native land in 1905 because of the persecution of Jews. The twins spent their growing-up years together. They dressed alike, they both played the violin, they wrote gossip columns for their high school and college newspapers. They attended Morning-side College in Sioux City. Two days before their 21st birthday, they had a double wedding. Pauline married Morton Phillips, a businessman, Esther married Jules Lederer, a business executive and later founder of Budget Rent-a-Car. The twins’ lives diverged as they followed their husbands to different cities. The Phillipses lived in Minneapolis, Eau Claire, Wis., and San Francisco, and had a son and daughter, Edward Jay and Jeanne. Esther lived in Chicago, had a daughter, Margo, and in 1955 she applied for and was given the job of writing the advice column. She adopted the existing column’s name, Ann Landers. Pauline, who had been working for philanthropies and the Democratic Party, followed her sister’s lead, though she insisted it wasn’t the reason for her decision. She arranged for an interview with an editor of the San Francisco Chronicle and presented sample columns, arguing that the paper’s lovelorn column was boring. The editors admired her breezy style, and she was hired. Searching for a name for the column, Pauline chose Abigail from the Bible and Van Buren from the eighth American president. Within a year she signed a 10-year contract with the McNaught Syndicate, which spread her column across the country.

Phillips admitted that her advice changed over the years. When she started writing the column, she was reluctant to advocate divorce: “I always thought that marriage should be forever,” she explained. “I found out through my readers that sometimes the best thing they can do is part. If a man or woman is a constant cheater, the situation can be intolerable. Especially if they have children. When kids see parents fighting, or even sniping at each other, I think it is terribly damaging.” She willingly expressed views that she realized would bring protests. In a 1998 interview she remarked: “Whenever I say a kind word about gays, I hear from people, and some of them are damn mad. People throw Leviticus, Deuteronomy and other parts of the Bible to me. It doesn’t bother me. I’ve always been compassionate toward gay people.” If the letters sounded suicidal, she took a personal approach: “I’ll call them. I say, ‘This is Abby. How are you feeling? You sounded awfully low.’ And they say, ‘You’re calling me?’ After they start talking, you can suggest that they get professional help.” The woman known to the world as Ann Landers died in June 2002. Later that year, the family revealed that Phillips had been diagnosed with Alzheimer’s disease. By then Phillips’ daughter, Jeanne Phillips, who had helped her mother with the Dear Abby column for years, was its sole author. Pauline Esther Friedman, known as Popo, was born on Independence Day 1918 in Sioux City, Iowa, 17 minutes after her identical twin, Esther Pauline (Ep-

Lady Cols mash Maroons

■ Henderson goes to 14-1, rolls 62-41 over Madisonville

Despite stretches with offensive struggles, Henderson County rolled to a 62-41 victory over Madisonville Thursday night at Colonel Gym.

The athletic Lady Maroons took away some of the advantages the Lady Colonels have had over other opponents and kept things close until Henderson County began to pull away with a 20-14 advantage in the third quarter.

The teams have an understandable similarity in styles as Madisonville head coach Brent Gibson is the son of Henderson County assistant Phil Gibson. One of his assistant coaches is Tom Fisher, who coached with Phil Gibson when he was Henderson County's boys coach.

"They knew what we were going to do. We do a lot of similar things. There were no surprises," Henderson County coach Jeff Haile said. "I thought they executed their offense well against our halfcourt man-to-man and executed their press offense against our press."

"They have a lot of speed out there and that hurt us. They got around us offensively. Defensively they were active us and they were able to keep up with us."

After leading 28-18 at halftime, the Lady Colonels (14-1) improved on 11-of-30 shooting in the first half by making 7-of-14 attempts from the field in the third quarter to expand the lead to 48-32.

done for four quarters. We're having lapses on offense and lapses on defense," Haile said. "We played better in the second half and got some deflections and turned them over some."

Ellie Fruit began to take control in the third as she scored nine of her game-high 21 points in the period. Madisonville (9-9) also had seven turnovers in the quarter and finished with 22 for the game.

DeAsia Outlaw turned in a double-double with 13 points and 10 rebounds.

"DeAsia was a plus for us. She got her hands up and got some deflections," Haile said. "She made some key shots around the basket."

Maci Brown and Kacie Wallace added 10 points apiece. Brown also had eight rebounds as Henderson County had a 32-28 advantage on the boards.

"They were guarding Ellie tight. They were guarding Maci tight. After Wallace made a shot, they got out on her too. They made it tough for us," Haile said.

Henderson County was helped by 9-of-11 shooting from the free-throw line, led by Fruit's 6-of-7 performance. Madisonville was 13-of-23 from the stripe. Toni McClelland, who led her team with 15 points, was 7-of-10 from the line.

The Lady Colonels led 26-13 midway through the second quarter but went more than 3:00 without scoring as the Lady Maroons cut the margin back to 26-18 just before halftime.

Henderson County won the junior varsity game 49-12. Aysia Jacobs led the Lady Colonels with 13 points and Brea Cooper added 10.

The Lady Colonels play

at Marshall County (14-5) tonight in the second of three games in Gunner's Magic Train Shootout. Henderson County plays the host school at 7 p.m. following a girls game between McLean County and Cairo, Ill. Marshall County's boys face Cairo in the final game.

"Any time you go down there, it's going to be tough," Haile said. "We're looking forward to the atmosphere with a big crowd."

Te'o mentioned 'girlfriend' recently

■ Star linebacker and Notre Dame face questions after hoax exposed

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Not once but twice after he supposedly discovered his online girlfriend of three years never even existed, Notre Dame All-American linebacker Manti Te'o perpetuated the heartbreaking story about her death.

An Associated Press review of news coverage found that the Heisman Trophy runner-up talked about his doomed love in a Web interview on Dec. 8 and again in a newspaper interview published Dec. 11. He and the university said Wednesday that he learned on Dec. 6 that it was all a hoax, that not only wasn't she dead, she wasn't real.

On Thursday, a day after Te'o's inspiring, playing-through-heartache story was exposed as a bizarre lie, Te'o and Notre Dame faced questions from sports writers and fans about whether he really was duped, as he claimed, or whether he and the university were complicit in the hoax and misled the public, perhaps to improve his chances of winning the Heisman.

Yahoo sports columnist Dan Wetzel said the case has "left everyone wondering whether this was really the case of a naïve football player done wrong by friends or a fabrication that has yet to play to its conclusion."

Gregg Doyel, national columnist for CBSSports.com, was more direct.

"Nothing about this story has been comprehensible, or logical, and that extends to what happens next," he wrote. "I cannot comprehend Manti Te'o saying anything that could make me believe he was a victim."

On Wednesday, Te'o and Notre Dame athletic director Jack Swarbrick said the player was drawn into a virtual romance with a woman who used the phony name Lennay Kekua, and was fooled into believing she died of leukemia in September. They said his only contact with the woman was via the Internet and telephone.

Te'o also lost his grandmother — for real — the same day his girlfriend supposedly died, and his role in leading Notre Dame to its best season in decades endeared him to fans and put him at the center of college football's biggest feel-good story of the year.

Relying on information provided by Te'o's family members, the South Bend Tribune reported in October that Te'o and Kekua first met, in person, in 2009, and that the two had also gotten together in Hawaii, where Te'o grew up.

Sports Illustrated posted a previously unpublished transcript of a one-on-one interview with Te'o from Sept. 23. In it, he goes into great detail about his relationship with Kekua and her physical ailments. He also mentioned meeting her for the first time after a game in California.

The wrenching story of Manti Te'o's girlfriend dying of leukemia — a loss he said inspired him to play his best all the way to the BCS championship — was dismissed by Notre Dame on Wednesday as a hoax perpetrated against the linebacker.

"We met just, ummmm, just she knew my cousin. And kind of saw me there so. Just kind of regular," he told SI.

Among the outstanding questions Thursday: Why didn't Te'o ever clarify the nature of his relationship as the story took on a life of its own?

Te'o's agent, Tom Condon, said the athlete had no plans to make any public statements Thursday in Bradenton, Fla., where he has been training with other NFL hopefuls at the IMG Academy.

Notre Dame said Te'o found out that Kekua was not a real person through a phone call he received at an awards ceremony in Orlando, Fla., on Dec. 6. He told Notre Dame coaches about the situation on Dec. 26.

The AP's media review turned up two instances during that gap when the football star mentioned Kekua in public.

Te'o was in New York for the Heisman presentation on Dec. 8 and, during an interview before the ceremony that ran on the WSBT.com, the website for a South Bend TV station, Te'o said: "I mean, I don't like cancer at all. I lost both my grandparents and my girlfriend to cancer. So I've really tried to go to children's hospitals and see, you know, children."

In a column that first ran in The Los Angeles Times, on Dec. 10, Te'o recounted why he played a few days after he found out Kekua died in September, and the day she was supposedly buried.

"She made me promise, when it happened, that I would stay and play," he said on Dec. 9 while attending a ceremony in Newport Beach, Calif., for the Lott Impact Awards.

On Wednesday, when Deadspin.com broke the story, Swarbrick said Notre Dame did not go public with its findings sooner because it expected the Te'o family to come forward first.

Asked if the NCAA was monitoring the Te'o story for possible rules violations, NCAA President Mark Emmert said:

"We don't know anything more than you do," he told reporters at the organization's convention in Dallas. "We're learning about this through the stories just the same as you are. But we have to wait and see what really transpired there. It's obviously (a) very disturbing story and it's hard to tell where the facts lie at this point."

"But Notre Dame is obviously looking into it and there will be a lot more to come forward. Right now, it just looks ... well, we don't know what the facts are, so I shouldn't comment beyond that."

Reporters were turned away at the main gate of IMG's sprawling, secure complex. Te'o remained on the grounds, said a person familiar with situation who spoke on condition of anonymity because neither Te'o nor IMG authorized the release of the information.

Briefs

Cardinals hire Arians as coach

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Arizona Cardinals have filled the NFL's final head coaching vacancy by hiring Indianapolis offensive coordinator Bruce Arians.

The team confirmed the hiring Thursday night.

The 60-year-old long-time assistant went 9-3 as Colts interim head coach while Chuck Pagano was undergoing treatment for leukemia last season.

Arians arrived in Arizona on Wednesday night, had dinner with top team officials, then interviewed on Thursday and met with reporters to indicate his interest in the job.

Marinelli out as Bears' DC

CHICAGO — Rod Marinelli will not return as the Chicago Bears' defensive coordinator next season.

New coach Marc Trestman says Marinelli has "made up his mind to move on." It was not clear who will replace him.

Marinelli is a longtime friend of former coach Lovie Smith. The Bears fired Smith after they missed the playoffs for the fifth time in six seasons.

Marinelli was hired as the Bears' defensive line coach in 2009 and spent the past three seasons as their coordinator.

Browns turning to Turner as OC

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Browns named Norv Turner their new offensive coordinator on Thursday.

Turner, fired by the Chargers as head coach earlier this month, led San Diego to a 59-43 record in six years with three division titles. He also was head coach of the Washington Redskins (1994-2000) and Oakland Raiders (2004-05).

New Cleveland coach Rob Chudzinski says he expects Turner to make a big impact on that side of the ball.

Ex-Cards coach new Chargers OC

SAN DIEGO — The San Diego Chargers hired former Arizona Cardinals head coach Ken Whisenhunt on Thursday to serve as the team's offensive coordinator.

New Chargers coach Mike McCoy lauded Whisenhunt's experience with the Cardinals and the Pittsburgh Steelers, saying Whisenhunt has a "very creative mind."

Whisenhunt was fired by the Cardinals on Dec. 31 after six mostly losing seasons but he also led the franchise to its lone Super Bowl appearance in 2009.

Former QB Leaf sent to prison

HELENA, Mont. — Former NFL quarterback Ryan Leaf is in prison after threatening a staffer and violating his therapeutic plan at a drug treatment center.

Leaf was serving nine months of a five-year sentence at the Nexus Treatment Center after pleading guilty to burglary and criminal possession of dangerous drugs.

Montana Department of Corrections documents released Thursday say Leaf told his roommate he wanted to drag a program staffer by his hair.

Most star pitchers not on U.S. roster

NEW YORK — Toronto's R.A. Dickey heads a starting pitching staff missing David Price, Justin Verlander, Jered Weaver, Clayton Kershaw and Matt Cain on the preliminary U.S. roster for the World Baseball Classic.

Milwaukee's Ryan Braun, Miami's Giancarlo Stanton, the Yankees' Mark Teixeira and the Mets' David Wright are among 27 players on the roster announced Thursday. The roster also includes Joe Mauer and Jimmy Rollins, and the bullpen is headed by Atlanta's Craig Kimbrel.

Final 28-man rosters are due Feb. 20.

Tim Hardaway Jr. scored 21 points and Trey Burke had 18 points and nine assists to help No. 5 Michigan stave off No. 9 Minnesota 83-75 on Thursday night.

Hardaway hit four 3-pointers in the first half for the Wolverines (17-1, 4-1 Big Ten), who had the lead for the final 33 minutes of the game and finished with 13 steals to fuel their fast break. Nik Stauskas added 11 points.

Austin Hollins led the Gophers (15-3, 3-2) with 21 points and four steals, and Trevor Mbakwe had 13 points, 10 rebounds and five blocks. Andre Hollins was drawn into early foul trouble, but he came alive after halftime to finish with 13 points and four assists.

■ Florida 68, Texas A&M 47: Mike Rosario scored 19 points and Patric Young added 18 for Florida.

The Aggies led by one point midway through the first half before a big run by the Gators gave them a 35-18 halftime lead.

It was a letdown for Texas A&M (12-4, 2-1 Southeastern Conference), which was coming off an 83-71 victory at Kentucky on Saturday. Elston Turner scored a career-high 40 points in that win, but managed just four points Thursday on 1-of-10 shooting.

■ Duke 73, Georgia Tech 57: Seth Curry scored 24 points to lead No. 3 Duke past Georgia Tech 73-57 on Thursday night.

Mason Plumlee added 16 points and 13 rebounds after going just 2 for 12 during an awful first half, and the Blue Devils (16-1, 3-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) shot 53 percent from the field over the final 20 minutes to bounce back from their only loss.

■ Murray State 70, Eastern Illinois 49: Isaiah Canaan netted 17 points as Murray State trounced Ohio Valley Conference-rival Eastern Illinois 70-49 Thursday night.

Dexter Fields added 12 points and Ed Daniel 10 with nine rebounds for the Racers (13-4, 4-1), who have won four of their past five.

Murray State drained 52.2 percent (24 of 46) from the field, including 11 of 25 from 3-point range with Canaan hitting 5 of 10 from deep and Fields knocking down 4 of 9.

■ Western Ky. 72, La.-Lafayette 49: Brandon Harris scored 16 points to lead four Western Kentucky players in double figures in a 72-49 rout of Louisiana-Lafayette on Thursday night.

Western Kentucky (11-8, 5-3 Sun Belt Conference) ended a three-game losing streak with devastating runs at the end of the first half and the start of the second.

■ Belmont 83, Eastern Ky. 76: Ian Clark scored 22 points and Blake Jenkins added 21 as Belmont held off Eastern Kentucky 83-76 Thursday night in a contest between two of the three undefeated Ohio Valley Conference teams.

The Bruins (14-4, 5-0) won their fifth straight game and share the league lead with Tennessee State (5-0).

■ Morehead State 75, SEMO 59: Drew Kelly led a balanced scoring effort with 15 points and Morehead State pulled away in the final 12 minutes of the game for a 75-59 victory over Southeast Missouri on Thursday night.

Jared White hit a pair of free throws with 12:05 left in the game to give Southeast Missouri (10-10, 2-4 Ohio Valley) its only lead of the second half 44-42.

■ Northwestern 68, Illinois 54: Reggie Hearn scored 20 points and Northwestern built an early lead using 3-point shooting to hand No. 23 Illinois its third straight loss, 68-54 on Thursday night.

Illinois has lost five of seven after starting 12-0.

■ UK women 100, Mississippi State 47: DeNesha Stallworth scored 25 points and No. 5 Kentucky moved to 17-1 for the best start in school history with a 100-47 rout of Mississippi State.

Stallworth was 9 of 15 from the field for the Wildcats, who moved past the 1982-83 team which opened 16-1.

Kobe gets 15th straight All-Star start

Wire reports

Kobe Bryant has been voted to his NBA-record 15th consecutive All-Star start, leading four Los Angeles players into next month's game.

Lakers teammate Dwight Howard and the Clippers' Chris Paul and Blake Griffin will join Bryant in the Western Conference lineup for the Feb. 17 game in Houston. Oklahoma City's Kevin Durant, the MVP of last year's game, rounds out the five.

Kevin Garnett held off Chris Bosh in fan balloting, giving the East two Boston Celtics and two Miami Heat players. LeBron James and Dwyane Wade will represent the defending champions and receive passes from Rajon Rondo. New York's Carmelo Anthony is the other starter.

Bryant finished with 1,591,437 votes, edging James by about 7,800 to finish as the leading vote-getter and break a tie with Shaquille O'Neal, Jerry West and Karl Malone for the most consecutive starting nods.

The NBA's leading scorer is a four-time MVP of the All-Star game and last year became its career scoring leader.

Garnett beat Bosh, who took to Twitter to stump for votes in the final days of balloting, by about 25,000 votes. He tied Bryant and O'Neal for second all-time with his 15th selection behind Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was elected to 19 games.

Rondo was injured in the playoffs two years ago after getting tangled up with Wade and landing awkwardly on his arm, part of what's become a tense rivalry between the Celtics and Heat.

Reserves will be announced next Thursday.

■ Knicks 102, Pistons 87: Carmelo Anthony returned to his Olympic gold medal past and scored 26 points Thursday to lead the New York Knicks to a 102-87 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Anthony scored 18 in the first half as the Knicks jumped out to a 16-2 lead before holding a double-digit lead for most of the game.

Amare Stoudemire added 17 points for the Knicks and J.R. Smith scored 16. Will Bynum led the Pistons with 22 points.

■ Clippers 90, Timberwolves 77: Jamal Crawford scored 22 points, Blake Griffin added 20 and the Los Angeles Clippers hardly broke a sweat in cruising to a 90-77 victory over the free-falling Minnesota Timberwolves on Thursday night.

Lamar Odom grabbed 12 rebounds and dished out six assists, and the Clippers outscored Minnesota's bench 45-23 to overcome Chris Paul's third straight missed game because of a knee injury.

Rose, Donaldson lead by one; McIlroy, Woods are struggling

Wire reports

With Rory McIlroy and Tiger Woods struggling, fifth-ranked Justin Rose and unheralded Jamie Donaldson had 5-under 67s Thursday for a one-shot lead after the opening round of the Abu Dhabi Golf Championship.

McIlroy, playing with new clubs following his multimillion dollar sponsorship deal with Nike, finished with a 75 and risks missing the cut. Woods shot an even-par 72.

Thorbjorn Olesen of Denmark and Pablo Larrazabal of Spain finished one stroke behind the leaders.

McIlroy repeatedly missed fairways, including a shot on his 12th that hit a tree and ended up in a parking lot, leading to one of his two double bogeys. His other came when he muffed a chip in thick rough on his par-3 6th. He also putted poorly, missing a par putt on his 17th and a birdie putt on the 18th.

The top-ranked McIlroy insisted his difficulties had more to do with rusty strokes than the new equipment that he hyped only a few days ago. While he repeatedly slumped after a bad shot or frowned following a missed putt, the 2012 European Tour and U.S. PGA Tour money winner seemed resigned to adjusting to the new Nike clubs.

"When you go out and you've got new stuff, you are going to be a little anxious and hopefully you play well," McIlroy said. "But I guess I can learn from it and move on and go into tomorrow and try and play a bit better. It's about playing yourself into the weekend."

Woods, who was paired with McIlroy, finished a rollercoaster round at par after "grinding it out." The 14-time major winner had four birdies and four bogeys and ended his round by three-putting his 18th for a bogey when he hit the second putt too hard.

"I'm still right there," said the second-ranked Woods, who was five shots behind the leaders.

■ Humana Challenge: Phil Mickelson opened his season with an erratic even-par 72 on Thursday in the Humana Challenge, leaving him nine strokes behind the first-round leaders.

Recovering from flu-like symptoms, the 42-year-old Mickelson had three birdies, a bogey and double bogey at La Quinta Country Club — one of three courses used in the pro-am event.

Lance Armstrong stripped of Olympic bronze medal

By Stephen Wilson
Associated Press

LONDON — On the day he went public with an admission of doping after years of denials, Olympic officials disclosed one more embarrassment for Lance Armstrong: He was stripped of a bronze medal won at the 2000 Sydney Games.

The International Olympic Committee sent a letter to Armstrong on Wednesday night asking him to return the medal, just as it said it planned to do last month. The decision was first reported Thursday by The Associated Press.

On Monday, Armstrong taped an interview with Oprah Winfrey for broadcast Thursday and Friday on her network. A person familiar with the situation told the AP that the winner of seven straight Tour de France titles confessed to Winfrey to using performance-enhancing drugs.

Federer set to take on last Aussie in tourney

By John Pye
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — His tennis attire now splashed with pink, Roger Federer was trying to recruit support for his next match.

Ordinarily, this wouldn't be a problem. Federer is one of the most popular athletes in Australia, where he has won four of his 17 Grand Slam titles.

The only problem is this: His 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 win over Nikolay Davydenko on Thursday night set Federer on course for a third-round match against Bernard Tomic, the last remaining Australian in the men's or women's draws.

The 20-year-old Tomic beat German qualifier Daniel Brands 6-7 (4), 7-5, 7-6 (3), 7-6 (8) in the last afternoon match on the center court at Melbourne Park, keeping his cool on a long, searing day in which temperatures hit 106 degrees.

Federer praised Tomic's play for the crowd, and later said he won't mind for whom or how loud fans are cheering Saturday.

"I don't think it matters whether he's the last Australian or 10 more," Federer said. "There's always excitement about Aussies playing here. I played him here last year. The crowd was great. I expect something similar. If it's not, if it's totally for him, that's fine, too. I'm always excited when the crowd gets into it."

Federer has added a few flashes of color for the year's opening Grand Slam event — neon pink shoelaces and trim on the back of his shoes, on the V-neck of his shirt and the swoosh on his black headband.

This is quite a departure from the Swiss star's usual hues and from the bright yellow that seems the predominant shade of choice for player clothes and accessories at this tournament.

"I like to play around with colors," he explained. "Fresh start to a new year. I wore a pink shirt a few years back. It was a best seller, so"

The day-time temperature got progressively hotter until late afternoon, meaning top-ranked Victoria Azarenka had it slightly easier in her second-round match — a 6-1, 6-0 win over Eleni Daniilidou, Greece — than third-ranked Serena Williams did in the very next match on Rod Laver Arena, a 6-2, 6-0 win over Garbine Muguruza of Spain.

Home sure has been sweet to Patriots

■ New England has perfect mark in its home conference title games

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Home sweet home. Sure works for the Patriots in the AFC title game.

New England gets a chance to extend its mastery in the final step to the Super Bowl on Sunday against Baltimore, the team the Patriots beat a year ago for the conference crown. That win made them 4-0 in home conference title games.

Although they were more vulnerable at home than usual during the 2012 regular season, losing to Arizona and San Francisco and having tight games with Buffalo and the Jets, the Patriots (13-4) are happy not to be heading to Baltimore (12-6) this weekend. Or anywhere else.

“Everything is on deck,” Patriots Pro Bowl defensive tackle Vince Wilfork said. “You have to put everything you have into this game. If you lose you go home, plain and simple.”

But the Patriots are at home, where they’ve been beaten in early-round games, including against the Ravens 33-14 three years ago. At this stage, though, no way.

That success rate for the AFC championship doesn’t fool Wilfork into feeling complacent. Just the opposite.

“This team always plays us tough,” Wilfork added. “This team has been in the playoffs on the road and won a lot of games. They won here in the playoffs. We have to be able to prepare well and execute very well at a high level. I don’t think we can (leave) no stone unturned in this game, because if we do it could cost us.”

The Patriots are one of the NFL’s best home teams, going 73-15 since Gillette Stadium opened in 2002, including 10-2 in the postseason. Many of those games have been routs.

But the Ravens are 8-5 in road playoffs, including their upset of the Broncos in double overtime last Saturday in an equally tough venue.

And there’s no reason to fear a trip to Foxborough, where no one has fared better in the playoffs.

Last January, they were an incompleteness in the end zone in the final minute — Sterling Moore stripped the ball from Lee Evans after the Ravens receiver had both hands on it — from winning. And then they botched a 32-yard field goal that would have forced overtime.

“These are two of the top teams for a long time now and we know each other very well,” Ravens star linebacker Ray Lewis said. “It’s that chess match; they are going to make plays and we are going to. It’s always one play here or there and who makes the last play will win. It will always be a 60-minute game.”

That’s something Lewis revels in as he makes a final run for a second championship before retiring when the Ravens are done.

“Both sides understand the game of football,” he said. “There have been some great, great rivalries and we have one of those going on with New England now.”

Baltimore won at home 31-30 in Week 3, which seems like eons ago. The Ravens were contending for the AFC’s top seed until losing four of their last five.

That dropped them out of a bye position, too, which New England grabbed. But the Ravens beat Indianapolis at home in the wild-card round, then stunned Denver.

“I think you always want to play at home. We want to play at home. We’ve got great fans and it’s a great atmosphere,” Ravens center Matt Birk said. “I’d say it’s certainly an advantage, but that’s the way it is. Ultimately it’s not going to decide the outcome of the game. Whoever plays better, more fundamentally sound football is going to win the game.”

Overall, the Ravens are 2-7 vs. New England, including 1-5 at Foxborough. Their defeats in five of the

Falcons: Kaepernick a new challenge

■ 49ers QB will present a dual threat

By Charles Odum
Associated Press

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. — Michael Turner’s trademark high-pitched laugh filled the Falcons’ locker room.

Asked about San Francisco quarterback Colin Kaepernick, Turner grinned Thursday and said “I’m glad I’m not on defense.”

Turner, the big running back, and the Falcons’ offense want to hold the ball and limit Kaepernick’s time on the field in Sunday’s NFC championship game.

The Falcons have seen enough in Kaepernick’s eight starts to respect the versatile quarterback with the long stride and strong right arm.

Kaepernick comes to Atlanta after running for 181 yards — an NFL record for a quarterback — with two touchdowns in last week’s win over Green Bay. Kaepernick also threw for 263 yards with two touchdowns. He became only the third quarterback, after Otto Graham and Jay Cutler, to run and throw for at least two touchdowns in a post-season game.

It’s little wonder the Falcons are impressed, even after facing such other dual-threat quarterbacks as Robert Griffin III, Cam Newton and Russell Wilson this season.

Linebacker Sean Weatherspoon says the 6-foot-4, 230-pound Kaepernick is unique.

“I think he’s just a different guy altogether,” Weatherspoon said. “He’s a taller guy, obviously. He broke the record last week, so that makes him special and different. I think he has a lot more speed. Russell is more of a quick guy. Colin is a faster guy.”

Wilson and Griffin are scramblers. Kaepernick looks more like a 200-meter sprinter with his unusually long stride.

“That’s the thing,” Weatherspoon said. “You look at him and you think long striders are not fast, but then you look and he’s covering a lot of ground and passing a lot of people. You can tell he can run. Speed won’t be a surprise to us. We’ve watched the tape. We’ll be ready to go.”

The 49ers don’t have to be told they’ll bring an unusually gifted quarterback to the Georgia Dome. In only half of a season, Kaepernick has given the San Francisco offense a facelift.

“He’s super-fast, athletic and he can throw the ball,” said 49ers running back LaMichael James. “Once he breaks the pocket he’s always looking downfield. He’s looking to throw the ball more than run the ball.

But once he takes off, he’s faster than a lot of running backs and linebackers. He’s an incredible athlete.”

Kaepernick has avoided the big hits that have made it difficult for such other running quarterbacks as Griffin and Michael Vick to avoid injuries.

He said his strategy is “Run where they’re not.”

“You want to run away from where the defensive players are,” Kaepernick said. “When they get close, get down.”

The Falcons’ defense has reason to worry about the matchup. Atlanta survived its 30-28 divisional playoff win over Seattle last week despite Wilson’s fourth-quarter dominance. The Falcons led 27-7 at the start of the quarter but trailed 28-27 before winning on Matt Bryant’s late 49-yard field goal.

Wilson passed for 385 yards with two touchdowns and led Seattle with 60 yards rushing and a touchdown.

Falcons coach Mike Smith said he is preparing for the 49ers’ “traditional offense that we’re used to seeing” as well as the pistol formation with read-option plays that Kaepernick ran in college at Nevada.

“We’re going to have to be prepared to stop him,” Smith said. “We’re going to see things we haven’t seen in terms of what they’ll do with their formations.”

Wilson found open room when he took off on long runs after first looking to pass. Falcons safety Thomas DeCoud said Kaepernick shows more determination to run.

“With Kaepernick, I think once he tucks the ball he’s looking to run,” DeCoud said. “There will be a few rare instances where he has his eyes looking downfield. More times than not, if he’s dropping back and tucks the ball, he’s taking off to run where Russell, he had his head up looking downfield and wasn’t really looking to cross the line of scrimmage. He was just trying to buy time for his guys to get open.”

Kaepernick’s big game last week earned him the promise of more attention from the Falcons defense.

“We definitely have to have somebody accounting for him,” DeCoud said, adding defensive backs have to be ready to leave their assignments to help contain Kaepernick’s runs.

“Last week we kind of bought into plastering the receivers if (Wilson) broke containment because of the fact he likes to find the open receivers,” DeCoud said. “This week, we’ll have to be cognizant of maybe coming off coverage if he crosses the line of scrimmage to thwart him making a big play on us.”

Falcons linebacker Mike Peterson said the one obstacle Kaepernick can’t dodge with his speed is inexperience. Sunday’s game will be Kaepernick’s first playoff game on the road.

last six meetings were by a combined 16 points.

Wilfork doesn’t care about history, recent or otherwise.

“This is going to be a battle,” he said. “Both teams deserve to be at this level. You have the two best teams in the AFC playing.”

“It just goes to show you the consistency of these teams. Every year it always seems like we are in it and they are in it and it just comes down to a couple of plays during the season or a couple of games in the season for these two ballclubs. For us we just have to be ready to go for 60 minutes; sometimes even more than that, as we saw last week. They went against a football team in Denver and they went out there and played more than 60 minutes. They came out on top, so that says a lot about how tough this football team is.”

Unlike some other potential visitors to New England, any weather issues won’t bother the Ravens, either. Hey, after sub-zero wind chill numbers at Denver last weekend, Baltimore will consider just about anything balmy.

The oddsmakers believe the home-field advantage is substantial for the Patriots, who are 9-point favorites. They’ll gladly accept those points before kickoff.

Jags hire Seahawks’ Bradley as head coach

By Mark Long
Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The Jacksonville Jaguars have an energetic head coach to go along with their brash general manager.

The Jaguars hired Seattle defensive coordinator Gus Bradley as the franchise’s fifth head coach Thursday, the latest move in the team’s rebuilding project.

The 46-year-old Bradley joins general manager Dave Caldwell, who led the coaching search after being hired last week.

“It was just a matter of time before Gus Bradley became a head coach in the NFL, and the Jacksonville Jaguars are extremely fortunate that Gus will be on our sidelines for many years to come,” Caldwell said in a statement. “Gus more than met every criteria we insisted on from our new head coach, and his intangibles and leadership abilities are exceptional. Gus is who the Jaguars need now and in the future.”

Bradley spent the last four seasons in Seattle, earning a reputation as a fiery assistant who demanded — and often got — the most from his players. His defense improved each of the last three years and finished in the top 10 in points and yards the last two. This season, the Seahawks ranked first in points allowed (15.3), fourth in yards (306.2) and tied for fourth in takeaways (31).

The Jaguars were 30th in the league in total defense in 2012.

Owner “Shad Khan and Dave Caldwell expect to win, and that’s what I wanted to hear,” Bradley said. “That’s why I am coming to Jacksonville — to win a Super Bowl.”

Bradley will be introduced at a news conference Friday.

His liveliness seems to be a good fit with Caldwell, who oozed confidence during his introduction last week.

Pick 6 of possibly surprising playoff performers

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

OK, so the name Tom Brady probably rings a bell. Ray Lewis, too. If either makes a key play in the AFC championship game Sunday, no one would be shocked one bit.

Same goes for Brady’s top receiver on the New England Patriots, Wes Welker. Or Lewis’ long-time partner on the Baltimore Ravens defense, safety Ed Reed.

Over in the NFC championship game, all eyes will be on Atlanta Falcons wideouts Roddy White and Julio Jones or tight end Tony Gonzalez, not to mention San Francisco 49ers quarterback Colin Kaepernick — he of the run-for-a-long-touchdown-then-kiss-your-biceps move — or All-Pro defenders Patrick Willis, NaVorro Bowman and Aldon Smith.

Established playmakers, all. Keep this in mind, though: More than 150 other guys will be wearing NFL uniforms in Foxborough and Atlanta this weekend. Here are some less-heralded guys who could play important roles in the conference title games and, if their team makes it, the Super Bowl:

Shane Vereen, Patriots RB: With superstar tight end Rob Gronkowski out with a broken left arm, and running back Danny Woodhead sidelined with a bum thumb, Vereen starred in last weekend’s 41-28 win over Houston. He scored three touchdowns in that game, after accumulating five TDs in his NFL career up to that point. Precisely the type of anonymous player New England seems to come up with season after season.

Rob Ninkovich, Patriots DE: Good as he’s been all regular season, he just doesn’t have the name recognition that, say, mammoth defensive tackle Vince Wilfork does. Yet there was Ninkovich — who appeared in only eight games over his first three NFL seasons — making a leaping interception, then grabbing an onside kick against the Texans.

Corey Graham, Ravens CB: Lauded mainly for his special teams play, he had only four interceptions and 10 starts in his first five NFL seasons, all with Chicago. But Graham emerged to help an injury-depleted Baltimore secondary, intercepting Peyton Manning twice in last weekend’s 38-35 double-overtime win at Denver — he returned one for a touchdown; the other set up the game-ending field goal. And he can talk the talk. His self-assessment this week: “I am a pretty savvy corner.”

Bernard Pierce, Ravens RB: He’s a rookie, he’s playing behind Ray Rice, and he was limited by a knee injury against Denver. So why is Pierce on the list? Well, for one thing, he showed what he can do by gaining 103 yards on only 13 carries in the first round of the playoffs against the Colts. He also ran for 123 yards on 14 carries against the Giants in Week 16.

Kroy Biermann, Falcons DE: Best known so far for being married to one of the Real Housewives of Atlanta, the fifth-round draft pick out of Montana in 2008 could be vital to keeping Kaepernick at home. The top-seeded Falcons didn’t generate a pass rush or succeed in containing Russell Wilson in a 30-28 win over Seattle last weekend; it didn’t help that John Abraham left after only 15 snaps because of an injured left ankle.

Tarell Brown, 49ers CB: Owner of 11 interceptions in six NFL seasons, he’s got a little streak going at the moment. Overshadowed by All-Pro safety Dashon Goldson and cornerback Carlos Rogers, Brown picked off Aaron Rodgers in a 45-31 win over the Packers last weekend — ending a 183-pass stretch without an interception by last season’s NFL MVP — and also grabbed one in San Francisco’s division-clinching win over Arizona in Week 17.

The league will play at the YMCA on Sunday evenings with grades 5-8 playing at 6 p.m. and grades 9-12 playing at 7:15 p.m. The league will run for six weeks. Girls will be instructed on basic techniques and rules every week for approximately 30-to-45 minutes and with matches played the last 30 minutes. Registration deadline is Feb. 6. Cost is $40 for Y members, $45 for youth members or $50 for non-members. Those registering after Jan. 30 will add $5. Financial assistance is available for low-income families but must be applied for by Feb. 6. Each girl will be placed on a team and receive a t-shirt. For more information, call 827-9622.

Applications for unemployment fall to 5-year low

DAMIAN DOVARGANES / ASSOCIATED PRESS

Target human resources executives Will Castro, left, and Rachel Ferguson, middle, screen hundreds of prospective candidates awaiting their turn to apply for job openings at a Target job fair last week in Los Angeles.

WASHINGTON — The number of Americans seeking unemployment aid plummeted to a five-year low last week, a hopeful sign the job market may be improving. But much of the decline reflects seasonal volatility in the data.

Weekly unemployment benefit applications fell 37,000 to a seasonally adjusted 335,000, the Labor Department said Thursday. That's the lowest level since January 2008, just after the recession began.

The four-week average, a less volatile measure, fell to 359,250.

The applications data can be uneven in January. Job cuts typically spike in the second week of the month as retailers, restaurants and other companies lay off temporary workers hired for the winter holidays.

The department seasonally adjusts the numbers to account for such trends, but the data can still be choppy.

Last week, the layoffs weren't as large as expected, a department spokesman said. That caused a steep drop in the seasonally adjusted data.

The broader trend will become clearer in the coming weeks.

Applications were declining slightly at the end of last year, pushing the four-week average to a four-year low in the last week of December.

The applications figures "suggest the labor market is getting better, the issue remains the extent of the improvement," said Joseph LaVorgna, an economist at Deutsche Bank.

Applications are a proxy for layoffs. Overall, applications remain at a level that suggests employers are hiring at a slow but steady pace. Applications fluctuated between 360,000 and 390,000 for most of last year. At the same time, employers added an average of 153,000 jobs a month.

That's just been enough to slowly push down the unemployment rate, which fell 0.7 percentage points last year to 7.8 percent.

Employers added 155,000 jobs last month, nearly matching the average for the year.

Copper prices are rising after two reports boosted optimism that the U.S. economic recovery is gaining traction. U.S. builders started work on homes in December at the fastest pace since the summer of 2008, the Commerce Department said Thursday. The Labor Department also reported that the number of Americans seeking unemployment benefits fell to a five-year low last week. The price of copper, which is used in construction, typically tracks the outlook for global economic growth.

"Undoubtedly, the strength in the housing data was certainly supporting the copper market," said Dave Meger at Vision Financial Markets.

Traders will also closely follow a series of reports about the Chinese economy, to be published late today, for indications about the outlook for growth in the world's second-largest economy, he said. Copper for March delivery rose 5.55 cents to $3.662 a pound in trading Thursday, its second-biggest gain of the month. Gold for February delivery gained $7.60 to $1,690.80 an ounce. Silver for March delivery rose 26.80 cents to $31.81 an ounce. April platinum edged higher, closing $6.40 up at $1,700.50 an ounce. Palladium for March delivery was little changed, dropping 30 cents to $726.15 an ounce.

Oil also rose because of growing optimism about the economy.

Benchmark crude gained $1.25 to $95.49 a barrel at midday on the New York Mercantile Exchange. That follows a gain of 96 cents Wednesday, which was prompted by concerns about contracting supplies.

Natural gas for February rose 5.9 cents to $3.494 per 1,000 cubic feet. March gasoline rose 4.4 cents to $2.7825 per gallon. Heating oil for March delivery rose 2.21 cents to $3.0145 a gallon.

In grain trading, wheat for March delivery dropped 3.75 cents to $7.8125 a bushel. March corn fell 6.75 cents to $7.245 a bushel and March corn fell 6.75 cents to $7.245 a bushel.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

CHICAGO — Grains futures fell Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat for March delivery fell 3.75 cents to $7.8125 a bushel; March corn fell 6.75 cents to $7.2450 a bushel; March oats fell 2.25 cents to $3.55 a bushel; while March soybeans fell 6.25 cents to $14.3025 a bushel.

Beef futures fell, while pork futures rose on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. February live cattle fell 1.92 cent to $1.2660 a pound; March feeder cattle fell 2.37 cents to $1.4585 a pound; February lean hogs rose 0.80 cent to 85.95 cents a pound.

problems at its mortgage unit. The bank made $367 million in the last three months of 2012 after paying preferred dividends, down sharply from $1.6 billion in the same period a year ago.

Kim Caughey Forrest, a senior analyst at Fort Pitt Capital Group, said it was too early to conclude that the housing market had turned the corner. She noted that a large "shadow inventory" of houses that still need to be foreclosed on may weigh on house prices in the coming months.

"This rally is probably a little bit too optimistic for the information that we got," Caughey Forrest said. "There's some conflicting information here and the market has just decided to overlook the negative thing."

Rio Tinto CEO steps down after $14 billion writedown

The Associated Press

LONDON — The chief executive of mining giant Rio Tinto PLC and another senior executive are stepping down immediately after the company announced a $14 billion write-down from its aluminum business and an acquisition of a coal company in Mozambique.

CEO Tom Albanese and Doug Ritchie, who led the Mozambique acquisition, were stepping down "by mutual consent" but would stay on until July 16 to assist with the transition, the company said Thursday.

Sam Walsh, head of the iron ore division, becomes chief executive of Rio Tinto, the world's third-largest diversified mining company.

Rio Tinto shares opened 4.1 percent lower in London at 3,315 pence before rebounding to be down 1.5 percent at midday.

"We had expected there to be further write-downs but the number is certainly more significant than the market would have anticipated, particularly given last year's impairments of around $9 billion," analysts at Investec Securities said in a research note.

Briefs

DETROIT

GM to invest $1.5 billion this year

General Motors says it will invest $1.5 billion in its North American factories this year.

North American President Mark Reuss announced the figure in a speech Wednesday night but gave no details. The company says specific plants and job numbers will come later.

GM is revamping 70 percent of its U.S. models as it switches from the oldest lineup in the industry to the newest.

Reuss says the investment is in addition to the $10.2 billion GM already has spent on its factories since July of 2009.

The company has added about 2,000 U.S. jobs since then.

Subway footlong under scrutiny

What's in an inch? Apparently, enough missing meat, cheese and tomatoes to cause an uproar.

Subway, the world's largest fast food chain with 37,000 locations, is facing criticism after an Australian man posted a picture on the company's Facebook page of one of its famous footlong sandwiches next to a tape measure that seems to shows it's just 11 inches.

More than 100,000 people have "liked" or commented on the photo, which has the caption "Subway pls respond."

Home construction hits four-year high

U.S. builders started work on homes in December at the fastest pace in 4½ years and finished 2012 as their best year for residential construction since the early stages of the housing crisis.

The Commerce Department said Thursday that builders broke ground on houses and apartments last month at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 954,000.

That's 12.1 percent higher than November's annual rate. And it is nearly double the recession low reached in April 2009.

Construction increased last month for both single-family homes and apartments. And the pace in which builders requested permits to start more homes ticked up to a ½ year high.

American Airlines unveils new look

American Airlines is getting a new look.

The airline showed off the first plane bearing a new logo and paint job at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport on Thursday.

The familiar red, white and blue stripes along the side of the fuselage are gone, replaced by a new logo and "American" in large letters on the silver body. Red and blue horizontal bars are emblazoned on the tail.

"We thought it was time to update the look — it's been 40 years," Thomas Horton, CEO of American's parent, AMR Corp., said in an interview.

NEW YORK

Legal costs drag Citigroup earnings

Citigroup's fourth quarter earnings fell short of Wall Street's expectations as the bank's legal expenses rose and it released less money from its loan-loss reserves.

The bank, based in New York, said a big chunk of the legal expenses came from a settlement reached last week over illegal foreclosure practices in the aftermath of the housing bust.

It was Citigroup's first quarter under the leadership of CEO Michael Corbat, who took the helm after former CEO Vikram Pandit resigned abruptly in October.

In a departure from an industry-wide trend, Citi said it originated fewer mortgages than in the year-ago quarter: $16.8 billion, down from $21.1 billion.

Mortgage originations increased at the nation's other top banks, including JPMorgan Chase, Wells Fargo and Bank of America.

Citi's stock fell $1.15, or 2.7 percent, to $41.33.

Advice

Constant correspondence from spouse irritates wife

Dear Amy: My husband travels by car all week long for his job. He feels the need to be in constant contact with me via his smartphone. He calls and emails constantly while on the road. Even though I work part time, he feels I should be in constant communication with him. I admit it was fun while we were dating, but I no longer have that much to say during the umpteenth phone conversation that day. Plus I'm too busy to constantly answer his texts, emails and phone calls. He feels it's my responsibility to talk to him while he's away from home. I have very little downtime, and while I want to talk to him two or three times a day, 10 texts and 10 calls is too much for me. How can I get him to understand that it is not that I don't love him or want to talk with him, but I just don't have that much to say! I would like to have an hour or so each day by myself to read or catch up with others instead of talking to him. — Too Connected Dear Connected: Your husband may be using his contact with you as a way to pass the time between sales calls (or appointments) when he's tooling through lonely towns in his car. (At least, that's how I picture him, passing through lonely towns in his car with only the occasional conversation with a friendly truck-stop server to break up the monotony.) My first suggestion is that you two negotiate a settlement to (at least) cut in half the number of phone calls during the day. It is not your responsibility to take all of his calls, regardless of whatever else you have on your plate. Your husband needs to realize that the less time you spend responding to his calls, the more time you will have to build up some good old-fashioned longing for him. Before his next trip, spirit a little surprise into his car.

Stick a note to the steering wheel that reads, "I can't wait to talk to you tonight, Honey." This might inspire him to hold off on calling until day's end. My second suggestion involves downloading the audio version of a few good books onto your husband's phone. This might inspire him to take in a little literature or learning while he's tooling around. This could transform his business week. Send questions via email to askamy@tribune.com or by mail to Ask Amy, Chicago Tribune, TT500, 435 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60611.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Jan. 18). You'll hone a talent in the next three months. New methods and levels of relaxation help you get more comfortable and masterful. March brings a loving force into your world. Children imitate you and family gives you an important responsibility. May is the start of a study you'll enjoy for years to come. Pisces and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 40, 1, 22, 31 and 19. ARIES (March 21-April 19). Remember people's names. It's the only way to interact fully. If you can remember people's names, you'll be at ease and relate in a manner that's meaningful to you. TAURUS (April 20-May 20). As for the less than optimal habits you've picked up along the way, you'll lose them in much the same way — by taking action one day at a time. You're the master of baby steps. GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You will let yourself heal. It's a simple and relaxed process. You'll steer your mind well and without force, finding peace and forgiveness inside yourself. CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll gravitate to those who compliment you -- it's only smart. You don't seek acknowledgement, but you know who is likely to give it to you. You'll get the encouragement you need to move forward. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). When you accept an idea as the truth without examination, you are in a hypnotic state of sorts. In some sense you will hear the snap of fingers and wake up, realizing that the situation you're in requires a different level of awareness. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Everyone likes a mystery, especially when it comes in the form of a person. You'll be the new one in a room. Leaving out major details of who you are will create a problem to solve. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). When events unfold haphazardly there is always a chance for a do-over in the theater of your mind. Play the scene over, only this time behave in exactly your preferred manner. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Whatever your feeling, in that moment it seems you will always feel that way. But feelings are like clouds — they change and pass. It's something to consider before you make major decisions based on them. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You're a teacher and so is your student. Today's experience of sharing will humble you both, even whilst making you both masters. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Even though you're pretty self-sufficient, you still like to be reminded every once in a while that you're doing a good job, fighting the good fight, and generally trying to do what's best. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Should you fight for what you want or accept what is? Maybe a little of both. As long as you're paying attention, you'll know which way to go at any given moment. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll pick up on what's going on just outside the range of your vision. This relates to your eyes and also your spirituality. Your peripheral vision is related strongly to psychic awareness.

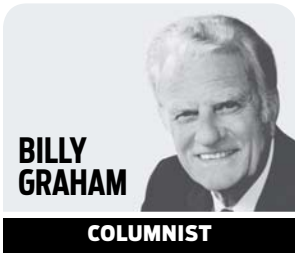

Pets should get heartworm pills year-round

Dear Readers: In the winter months, many people may think that they don't need to give their pets heartworm pills, especially in the far Northern states, where winter really settles in. This is not true! The American Heartworm Society recommends giving heartworm prevention year-round, even in seasonal areas. Here are several reasons: ■ You can never guarantee that mosquitoes are no longer a threat. Even areas with cold winters can have unseasonably warm periods. ■ Many heartworm preventatives also treat for intestinal parasites, like hookworms, roundworms and whipworms, so monthly is good to prevent other problems, too. ■ Many companies guarantee their product. If your dog becomes heartworm positive while on their product, they will pay for treatment. But you must be able to prove that they were on it consistently. The benefits greatly outweigh the risks. Heartworms can be anywhere from 4 to 12 inches and are deadly. Heartworm prevention is much less expensive than the treatment, much safer for your beloved dog! — Heloise

Good marriage is based on commitment stability and strength. And it will be, when a husband and wife put God first in their lives and make Him the foundation of their marriage. God has given us His pattern for marriage in His Word: "A man will leave his father and mother and be united to his wife. ... So they are no longer two, but one" (Mark 10:7-8). A good marriage isn't a question of physical attraction or compatible personalities. These have their place, but most of all a good marriage is based on commitment — commitment to each other, and commitment to God. Emotions come and go; physical attraction fades; differences can flare into anger and conflict. But when we know Christ, we know that true love involves a commitment to do what is best for the other person. Thank God every day for His grace in your lives — and for hope that extends beyond the grave. Send your queries to "My Answer," c/o Billy Graham, Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, 1 Billy Graham Parkway, Charlotte, N.C., 28201; call 1-(877) 2-GRAHAM, or visit the Web site for the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association: www.billygraham.org.)

desire to want to do something, when in fact there usually is nothing to do except make sure the person having the seizure doesn't hurt him- or herself, usually by falling. Never put anything into a person's mouth; it's not possible to swallow the tongue. Another terrifying aspect is that during a seizure, people actually can stop breathing for a minute or two and turn blue. That minute or two may be the longest of your life if it's your child. Turning the head gently to the side may help keep the airway open, but don't attempt artificial respiration unless he or she continues not breathing after the seizure has stopped, in which case you should call 911. You also should call 911 if the seizure lasts more than five minutes, if another one comes on or if the person is injured during the seizure. It is indeed very common to be confused or sleepy after a seizure. The person may go to sleep for hours, but the confusion usually lasts only 15 minutes or so. Do not attempt to give food or water until the person is fully awake and alert. First seizures always should be rapidly evaluated by a physician. Dear Dr. Roach: I just turned 80. I have been a regular blood donor for many years, and was surprised to learn my contribution was unacceptable because of lack of iron. I was called upon to give several times following, but with the same result. I mentioned it recently to an 85-year-old friend, who said he had the same problem and had started an iron pill regimen. — B.S. Dear B.S.: There are a few "rules" you learn in medical school, and one of them is this: You should assume that any man with iron deficiency has colon cancer until you prove that isn't the case. Before taking iron for iron-deficiency, you need to know why you are iron deficient. Discuss this with your doctor. A colonoscopy is the best test to determine why you might be losing blood (iron) through the GI tract. It isn't appropriate for screening in an 80-year-old, but trying to find a cause for iron deficiency isn't screening.

Obama gets second chance at speech for ages

By Connie Cass
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sixteen presidents before Barack Obama got a second chance at giving an inaugural address for the ages. Most didn't make much of it.

George Washington's remarks the second time around were admirably succinct — only 135 words — but hardly qualify as an address.

Thomas Jefferson, who laid out a masterful brief on democracy at his first oath-taking, spent much of his second complaining that the press was telling lies about him. Ulysses S. Grant also began his second term by grouching that he'd been slandered, although it's unlikely those who had heard his first inaugural were expecting much better.

Abraham Lincoln is the grand exception. Just matching his first offering, with its lyric appeal to the "better angels of our nature," would have been a feat. On his second try, Lincoln brought forth the most-acclaimed inaugural address ever, one of the great American speeches. Four years of civil war at last coming to a close, he summoned his countrymen to bind up the nation's wounds, "with malice toward none, with charity for all."

Such poetic lightning is unlikely to strike again. Indeed, expectations for inaugural eloquence are low these days, giving Obama some breathing room as he prepares for Monday.

"Most inaugural addresses are just pedestrian," said Martin J. Medhurst, a professor of politics and rhetoric at Baylor University. Their function is ceremonial; they lack emotion and urgency.

After reading all 56 inaugural addresses to date, presidential historian Charles O. Jones found: "A lot of them, frankly, are highly forgettable."

And second inaugu-

erals? Even worse.

"Reality has set in," Medhurst said. "You don't have these grand visions for change you had when you were first coming into office."

Lincoln's brilliance aside, the phrasings that gleam brightest in American memory came from newly minted presidents: Franklin Roosevelt's "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself." John F. Kennedy's "ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country." Ronald Reagan's "government is not the solution to our problem; government is the problem."

After four years of familiarity in the White House, does Obama stand any chance of speaking inaugural words that will long endure?

There are a couple of factors in his favor.

His gifts as an orator, for one. Obama is renowned for his 2004 Democratic Convention keynote, his Philadelphia meditation on race, his victory speeches in the 2008 primaries, his Nobel Prize acceptance.

Nonetheless, his first inaugural address seemed overwhelmed by the historic impact of the moment — an event that drew nearly 2 million people to the National Mall and seemed to transcend political ideology. Perhaps the speech's most powerful line was Obama's noting that "a man whose father less than 60 years ago might not have been served in a local restaurant can now stand before you to take a most sacred oath."

"The only thing anyone remembers about that one is that the first African-American president was inaugurated," said Kathleen Hall Jamieson, director of the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg Public Policy Center.

The soaring rhetoric so many Americans expect from Obama was missing that day. Jamieson said the speech lacked what an inaugural address needs to make history's short list: a clearly communicated, overarching theme and a memorable line that encapsulates it.

His "new era of responsibility" didn't grab the popular imagination.

Medhurst says that speech, though little remembered, was actually better than most inaugural efforts because it worked as a unified whole to lay out Obama's vision. Yet he doesn't have high hopes for Jan. 21.

"If his second inaugural ends up being a speech he's remembered for I will be astounded, because that just almost never happens," Medhurst said.

Lowered expectations and muted excitement may ease the pressure on the president and his speechwriters this time around.

Another break for them, ironically: Four years after the first swearing-in, the United States is still mired in serious troubles that need talking about.

Bad times make better speeches, said Jones, because they give a returning president something to say beyond "here I am,

I got re-elected, let's push on."

He points to FDR's second inaugural during the Great Depression ("I see one-third of a nation ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-nourished") and Woodrow Wilson's address preparing Americans to enter World War I ("There can be no turning back").

Today's worries — anxiety about joblessness, a sense of political disarray, fear that the nation is in chronic decline — are less dire than what Roosevelt and Wilson faced. Yet they could create a backdrop for resolve and yes-we-can inspiration.

"This is a moment in which the country is looking to the president to assure us that we remain a great nation, that our future is going to be better than our past, and here are the principles that will enable us to do this," Jamieson said.

"You have the pieces on the table to deliver a great speech," she said. "The question is will he do it?"

And if Obama does, the next question becomes: Can he live up to it? A great inaugural address is also measured by how well its promise is fulfilled.

No matter how eloquent the wording, there was no chance history would remember Richard Nixon for his second inaugural pledge: "to make these next four years the best four years in America's history."

Most addresses fade over time but these inaugurals will endure

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A sampling of inaugural addresses remembered for speaking eloquently to their historical moment:

FIRST INAUGURALS

George Washington, who began the tradition of the inaugural address in 1789:

"The preservation of the sacred fire of liberty and the destiny of the republican model of government are justly considered, perhaps, as deeply, as finally, staked on the experiment entrusted to the hands of the American people."

Thomas Jefferson, 1801, after a divisive election tested the young democracy:

"Every difference of opinion is not a difference of principle. We have called by different names brethren of the same principle. We are all Republicans, we are all Federalists."

Abraham Lincoln, 1861, struggling to hold the United States together:

"Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, 1933, bracing a nation devastated by the Great Depression:

"Let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself — nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance."

John F. Kennedy, 1961, grasping the generational torch in a speech flush with memorable lines:

"And so, my fellow Americans: Ask not what your country can do for you — ask what you can do for your country. My fellow citizens of the world: Ask not what America will do for you, but what together we can do for the freedom of man."

Ronald Reagan, 1981, recasting Washington's role:

"In this present crisis, government is not the solution to our problem; government is the problem."

SECOND INAUGURALS

Abraham Lincoln, 1865, on reuniting the Civil War-torn nation:

"With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan, to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

Woodrow Wilson, 1917, readying reluctant Americans to join World War I:

"We are provincials no longer. The tragic events of the thirty months of vital turmoil through which we have just passed have made us citizens of the world. There can be no turning back."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, 1937, as the Depression dragged on:

"Here is the challenge to our democracy: In this nation I see tens of millions of its citizens — a substantial part of its whole population — who at this very moment are denied the greater part of what the very lowest standards of today call the necessities of life. ... I see one-third of a nation ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-nourished."

Tight security, protests expected at 2013 celebration

By Eric Tucker
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Tea party fervor has surged and waned in the past four years, Occupy encampments are long gone from parks in the nation's capital, and the crowd for President Barack Obama's second inauguration figures to be significantly smaller than the record-breaking turnout of 2009.

But spectators can still expect the customary tight security long associated with the event — not to mention protesters for assorted causes.

City and federal officials are implementing measures intended to prevent calamities, such as a terrorist attack, and to address more mundane concerns, such as slow-moving security lines and cold weather. Flight restrictions are in place in the skies over Washington, with extra security on the city's waterways. Spectators will be limited in where they may drive and what they may bring. The Secret Service, the lead law enforcement agency for the Jan. 21 event, isn't revealing specific precautions, though tactics in the past have included trained counter-snipers, bomb-sniffing dogs and surveillance cameras with feeds streaming into a command center.

City officials are expecting between 600,000 to 800,000 inauguration spectators, far fewer than the 1.8 million people who packed the Mall for the inauguration four years ago. But many of the security measures and restrictions will look familiar. Roads around the U.S. Capitol, the Mall and the White House will be closed to vehicles, with parking restricted and bridge traffic diverted in some locations. Some Metrorail stations will be closed, others probably packed. Backpacks, large signs, bicycles, glass containers and weapons are forbidden along the parade route. And anyone who wants to see the swearing-in ceremony from the U.S. Capitol grounds needs a ticket.

Russian adoption ban wrenching for families

By Jim Heintz and David Cray
Associated Press

MOSCOW — From their far-away homes in the American West, the two couples made repeated missions of love to Moscow, each seeking to adopt children with Down syndrome.

Now, with court approval at last in hand, a political squabble with a trace of Cold War friction has derailed those plans, leaving them in anxious limbo.

Brian Preece had been hoping his life as an adoptive father would have started by now, perhaps with a special treat for his 4½-year-old boy.

"I was planning on going swimming with my son," he said. But instead of splashing around in a pool in Nampa, Idaho, Preece and his wife, Rebecca, sat in a Moscow hotel lobby this week, at loose ends after officials refused to turn over the boy even though a court approved the adoption last year.

With them was Jeana Bonner of South Jordan, Utah, on her fourth trip to Russia as part of intensive efforts by her and her husband, Wayne, to adopt a 5-year-old girl.

"There is no process set up, there is no information specific to our case," said Bonner, who left her husband behind in Utah to care for their two biological daughters, including one with Down syndrome.

The Bonners and Preeces have run into a legal cul-de-sac. After their adoptions received court approval, they expected to wait nervously through a 30-day period in which the ruling can be challenged, then get the decree allowing them to take custody of the children, obtain needed documents and take them home.

But during those 30 days, Russia enacted a law banning adoptions by Americans. The ban was rushed through parliament and sped to President Vladimir Putin's desk in less than 10 days in a surge of retaliatory anger over a new U.S. law calling for sanctions on Russians identified as human-rights violators.

The hasty enactment left many questions unresolved. Although Putin spokesman Dmitry Peskov has said that adoptions already approved by courts could go ahead, the Preeces said Tuesday they were told that the ban has left a legal vacuum — with no mechanism for issuing the decree that finalizes the case.

"The process used to be all streamlined and fairly straightforward. Now there's no instructions," said Rebecca Preece, on an emotional knife-edge as months of visits and paperwork hit a roadblock.

"He understands that we're coming for him," she said of the boy they hope to adopt. "We were able to visit him ... and he talked about going in a car with us, in an airplane.

"He knows. He calls us 'mama' and 'papa'," she said, on the verge of tears. "We've come for him three times and three times we've had to leave."

A spokesman for Russia's Supreme Court, Pavel Odintsov, told The Associated Press on Wednesday that the high court is seeking information that would allow it to make recommendations on establishing a legal framework for resolving the dilemma.

It is unclear when that clarity might come, but "we are not talking about months; possibly a couple of weeks," he said.

Now, Preece said, the question is whether to stick around in Moscow to see the process through and hope things don't go further awry, or go home and wait it out in Idaho.

The Preeces have three other children, including one with Down syndrome. The plan now is for Brian to go home this weekend, to attend to the couple's fireplace business.

Jeana Bonner, in a telephone interview before leaving Utah, said she and her husband have felt so enriched by the experience of raising their own daughter with Down syndrome that they wanted to adopt a child who also had the condition.

"It was something we felt we could do — we had experience, we had the resources and support," she said.

During three previous trips to Russia, dating back to last June, the Bonners have met seven times with the girl they hope will be their daughter.

"She's an amazing little girl, very active, very bright," Jeana Bonner said. "It's very apparent that the staff at her orphanage take very good care of the children ... But nothing can replace a family. We plan to take care of her for the long haul."

The Bonners and Preeces are among 52 U.S. families who'd won court approval for their adoptions before the ban was signed. Hundreds more families — perhaps 1,500 in all — were in some earlier phase of pursuing an adoption from Russia, and they too are in limbo.

Many listened in on a State Department conference call last week, and have been seeking assistance from their congressional representatives. But definitive answers are elusive.

"The information we have is very minimal — it's frustrating," said Joe Carrasquillo of Romeoville, Ill.

He and his wife, Jenna — both high school special education teachers — traveled to Russia in December to meet two boys they hope to adopt, and were dismayed as the ban began speeding through Parliament at the end of their visit.

"It was a real rough moment for us," Carrasquillo said in a telephone interview.

But his voice brightened as he recalled three straight days of meeting the two boys — one 3½ and the other almost 2 — who live at different orphanages in the southern city of Rostov-on-Don.

Brian Preece and his wife Rebecca, of Nampa, Idaho, who want to adopt a Russian boy with Down's syndrome, speak in Moscow, Russia.

"We know both boys would be a great addition to our family," Carrasquillo said. "You feel a bond to them already even after one visit, and every day you got a little closer."

He and his wife, who committed themselves to adoption even before they married, won't be looking to another country until they get a clear answer from Russia.

"We don't want to consider another option until we know this option is closed to us," said Carrasquillo.

Some families caught in the diplomatic limbo have decided not to speak publicly about their situation for fear there might be negative repercussions.

But Wendy Rella, a hair stylist from Bedford, N.H., said she and her husband, Peter, are taking an outspoken approach. They have a 4-year-old daughter, Alina, whom they adopted from Russia in 2009, and they were back in Russia last month visiting a 10-month-old boy they hope to add to their family.

News of the ban broke soon after they'd completed their 20-hour trip to Vladivostok, on Russia's Pacific Coast, to visit the boy.

"You feel sick to your stomach, wondering, 'What's the deal here?'" Wendy Rella recalled.

Since returning home, Rella has been writing to her U.S. senators, sharing her story with local media, and following the news in Russia — including a march Sunday in Moscow protesting the adoption ban.

"If we stay quiet, they won't know who we are," Rella said. "I'm afraid we're going to be forgotten about. I don't want people to stop marching, to stop talking about it ... I keep thinking we are going to get him home."

Like the Rellas, Kurt and Ann Suhs are hoping to adopt a sibling for a child they previously adopted from Russia — in their case, it's 7-year-old Ben.

Kurt Suhs, who works for an insurance company in the Atlanta area, said his grandmother was Russian. So there's an element of heritage at work as they try to expand their family even at costs that typically exceed $50,000 per adoption from Russia.

"Russians are good people," Suhs said. "You just have to hope people put aside the politics and do the right thing for the kids."

The immediate cause of Russia's ban was to retaliate for the new U.S. law targeting Russians accused of human rights abuses. But the ban also reflects long-brewing resentment in Russia over the 60,000 Russian children who have been adopted by Americans in the past two decades, 19 of whom have died.

UNICEF estimates there are about 740,000 children not in parental custody in Russia — and 105,000 live in orphanages. Russia has been trying to increase domestic adoptions and says about 18,000 Russians are on the waiting list to adopt a child.

The number of domestic adoptions fell in recent years: Russians in 2011 adopted 7,416 children, a drop of more than 2,100 from 2007, according to Education Ministry figures published in the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

The same report showed that Americans adopted 956 Russian children in 2011, 89 of them classified as disabled.

Chuck Johnson of the Virginia-based National Council for Adoption has commended Russia for trying to improve its child-welfare system, and was elated in November when the U.S. and Russia completed a long-in-the-works adoption treaty. Now, he's dismayed at the ban and its emotional toll on the affected U.S. families.

For the Bonners, however, there's no option but to persevere — especially in light of bureaucratic setbacks last year that twice made them think their adoption quest was doomed.

"Two times it looked like there was no way it was going to work out, and we grieved through that," Jeana Bonner said. "It just hurts and is so painful."

"This time we're going to be a hopeful as possible. We're not going to give up until we've exhausted every possible avenue."

Reckless Driving
IS ONE PARTY YOU
DON'T WANT TO CRASH

(There is no cheesy slogan to prevent reckless driving.)

There is no spokesperson with a catchy phrase to remind the driver to slow down, stop eating, quit messing with the radio or pay attention to the road.
There's Only You. Speak Up.

Today in history

The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Jan. 18, the 18th day of 2013. There are 347 days left in the year.

Today's highlights in history:

On Jan. 18, 1943, during World War II, Jewish insurgents in the Warsaw Ghetto launched their initial armed resistance against Nazi troops, who eventually succeeded in crushing the rebellion. The Soviets announced they'd broken through the long Nazi siege of Leningrad (it was another year before the siege was fully lifted). In the U.S., a ban on the sale of pre-sliced bread — aimed at reducing bakeries' demand for metal replacement parts — went into effect.

On this date:

In 1911, the first landing of an aircraft on a ship took place as pilot Eugene B. Ely brought his Curtiss biplane in for a safe landing on the deck of the armored cruiser USS Pennsylvania in San Francisco Harbor.

In 1913, entertainer Danny Kaye was born David Daniel Kaminsky in New York City.

In 1967, Albert DeSalvo, who claimed to be the "Boston Strangler," was convicted in Cambridge, Mass., of armed robbery, assault and sex offenses. (Sentenced to life, DeSalvo was killed in prison in 1973.)

In 1993, the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday was observed in all 50 states for the first time.

Ten years ago: Michelle Kwan won her sixth straight U.S. Figure Skating Championships title and seventh overall; Michael Weiss won his third U.S. men's title at the competition in Dallas.

Five years ago: With recession fears rising and the stock market tumbling, President George W. Bush called for up to $150 billion in tax relief for consumers and business, saying there was no time to waste. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon designated George Clooney a U.N. "messenger of peace" to promote the world body's activities. Actress Lois Nettleton died in Woodland Hills, Calif., at age 80.

THINK ABOUT IT

"Life is a great big canvas, and you should throw all the paint you can on it."
— Danny Kaye (1913-1986).

BEST BETS

6 p.m. on 13 NBA Basketball

Two intraconference rivalries play out tonight on ESPN, starting with this tilt in Boston between Kevin Garnett's Celtics and the Joakim Noah-led Chicago Bulls. Despite missing All-Star point guard Derrick Rose, the Bulls have managed to stay at or near the top of the Central Division. The Bulls have split two games with the Celts so far this season. In the nightcap, two Southwest foes clash when the Dallas Mavericks host the Houston Rockets.

7 p.m. on 14 Betty White's Off Their Rockers

Betty White. "Gangnam Style." 'Nuff said. In this episode, South Korean entertainer Psy teaches Betty and her fellow pranksters the dance moves from his hit video. In other funny bits, a senior urges people to sign a petition opposing identity theft — giving up all kinds of personal information in the process — and a jogger steals food from a restaurant customer.

7 p.m. on 44 Undercover Boss

In this new episode, Paul Damico, president of Moe's Southwest Grill, takes on an assortment of jobs in his restaurant chain, which has more than 470 locations in the U.S. and elsewhere. As with other bosses featured in the series, he gains some insights about the working conditions for his rank-and-file staff and has some surprises for those he works with.

7 p.m. on 44.2 Fringe

The fan favorite sci-fi series comes to an end in this two-hour, two-episode event that also marks the show's 100th episode. Anna Torv, John Noble, Joshua Jackson and Georgina Haig star.

7:31 p.m. on 25 Malibu Country

Reba (Reba McEntire) has been trying for months to get a meeting with Mr. Bata. So when June (Juliette Angel) lands the meeting instead, she struggles to be happy for her daughter. Lillie Mae and Kim (Lily Tomlin, Sara Rue) see dollar signs when they find out Cash (Justin Prentice) has a knack for picking winners in horse races in the new episode "Easy Money."

8 p.m. on 25 Shark Tank

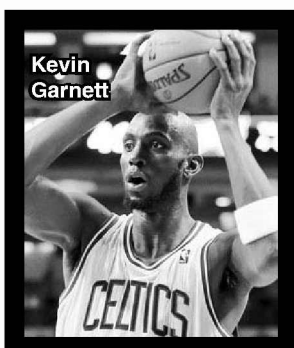

How do two sharks kiss? Very carefully. In this episode, two fellows from Utah ask Barbara Corcoran and Kevin O'Leary to sample their products: flavored lip balms made especially for kissing. An Idaho inventor calls one Shark's offer on his unusual clothing item "insane" and calls in Steve Wozniak of Apple for advice. A newlywed and newly unemployed Florida woman presents a line of innovative kitchen products.

8:30 p.m. on 63 Movie: Goon

Legendary to fans of the "American Pie" franchise as Stiffer, Seann William Scott tries his hand at hockey in this comedy about a fellow thrust into the sport by circumstance. He decides to make the most of the opportunity, supported by his best friend (Jay Baruchel, who also co-wrote the film) but potentially thwarted by a rugged opponent (Liev Schreiber) on the ice. Fellow "American Pie" veteran Eugene Levy also is featured.

9 p.m. on 11 Real Time With Bill Maher

After a few weeks off, the acerbic comedian and commentator is back, and not a moment too soon.

Each live show features an opening monologue, discussions with Maher and a guest panel, special guests and taped segments, and Maher's "New Rules" feature — which exposes society's most absurd habits and institutions.

9 p.m. on 10 Banshee

Episode 2 of the new action drama delves deeper into the town of Banshee's seedy underbelly, as ex-con Lucas Hood (Antony Starr) finds he's not the only one harboring secrets. Having assumed the identity of the town's new sheriff, Lucas intervenes when drug dealers turn a rave into a deadly dance party. Ivana Milicevic and Ulrich Thomsen also star in "The Rave."

10 p.m. on 44 Two and a Half Men

OK, so Alan's (Jon Cryer) ex-wife (Marin Hinkle) is marrying this guy named Herb (Ryan Stiles). And Alan's brother, Charlie (Charlie Sheen), is developing a thing for Herb's sister, Myra. Is this incest? Nah, but you might need a score card to keep track of who's with whom — much as you did when Charlie was romancing Alan's girlfriend's mom. The very funny Judy Greer ("Arrested Development") plays Myra in "Soft as a Ken Doll."

10 p.m. on 63 Being Human

Season 2 of the hit series ended with Aidan (Sam Witwer) buried alive as punishment from vampire leader Mother, Sally (Meaghan Rath) lost in a state of limbo and Josh's (Sam Huntington) plot to kill his Maker Ray backfiring, endangering Nora (Kristen Hager) instead. New and returning guest stars this season include Mark Pellegrino as Bishop, Aidan's vampire mentor, and Amy Aquino as Donna, a witch whose spells are sought out to help find Sally.
